

M'NAMARA'S CONFESSIONS STARTLE LABOR WORLD BY UPSETTING ALL PLANS TO AID IN THEIR DEFENSE

UNION LEADERS ARE MORE THAN SURPRISED BY THE SUD-DEN CHANGE IN FRONT OF THE MEN WHO ARE CALLED MAR-TYRS TO THE CAUSE.

RESULT OF HARD WORK

Both Men Closely Guarded in Their Cells in the Los Angeles Jail—Lawyers Make Statements Relative to the Case—Confessions Did Not Come As Surprises.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Los Angeles, Dec. 2.—Startling as was the sudden confession of guilt yesterday on the part of John J. Mc-Namara, secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Iron Workers and his brother, James H.
McNamara, the one of causing the Lawson Iron Works explosion and the other the Los Angeles Times disaster which cost twenty-two lives, more amazing to the people of Los Angeles today was to learn that their business men have brought about the surrender in a novel way.

That application of the golden rule and the principle of reconciliation founded on the liberal confession started the ball rolling towards the confession of guilt by the McNamara brothers.
The theory that was confirmed by a score of business men who participated in the movement which today stands forward as the reason for the abrupt conclusion of the trial which was begun less than two months ago.

Matters Unexplained.
Despite this chain of unexplained incidents produced wide speculation.
These include the arrest of J. Franklin, a defense detective on the charge of bribing a prospective juror. The silence maintained by the prosecution at the time of the arrest; the mysterious appearance yesterday at the district attorney's office of L. Sullivan, a detective and the action of the prosecution when it was discovered that Sullivan's visit had become known to outsiders.

The idea that a group of business men had put their heads together to prevent the prolonging of the customary trial that would have been rattled off by the McNamara brothers because of the uncertainty that might have hurt the business interests is one which causes wide disturbance because prominent people were secretly acquainted with the fact that a completed movement was on foot to bring about a compromise.

Up To Last.
Asked as to when the compromise movement was finally settled on, by which the McNamara's were to plead as they did, District Attorney Frederick said today, "It was never settled until it happened. Frankly I did not know that it was really going to happen until the last minute, though I had every reason to expect it."

Was The Best.
Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel for the McNamara's, himself a sociologist and philosopher, reiterated today the compromise was best for all concerned, namely James H. to get life imprisonment, instead of a brief death penalty, and John J. a brief prison sentence, while for the accusing side came the victory of the case with its pile of evidence gathered after long and vigorous investigation.

Under.
The McNamara's with a heavy guard at their cell door, spent as the five armed men were stationed near them.
Extra police patrolled the streets by the jail and no one was permitted to enter in the vicinity.

More Arrests.
Further arrests in the Los Angeles Times dynamite outrage may come at any time, according to Detective William J. Burns today. "There are others in this case that are just as guilty as either of the McNamara brothers," said Detective Burns.

Issues Statement.
San Francisco, Dec. 2.—After he had received from Los Angeles telegraphic confirmation of the McNamara confession and plea, Andrew J.
Chapman, secretary of the San Francisco Labor council, issued the following statement:

"We do not purpose to condone violence of any sort on the part of any one who thinks, or pretends that he represents labor. The battles of labor are not going to be fought or won by the use of dynamite or any kindred weapons of anarchy. We ought to defend the accused men and did all in our power to aid them, because they were afflicted with labor and because we thought them innocent. But we do not seek to go beyond the law in the defense of any one."

Furnishes Club.
Denver, Dec. 2.—Charles H. Meyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, who with William D. Haywood and John A. Patterson, was arrested in connection with the murder of former Governor Steiwer, five years ago, declared today that the confession of the McNamara's turned out to be a club which it would "not be slow to use against organized labor. For that reason, no matter how guilty I might have been I never would have confessed," said Meyer.

Only Begun.
New York, Dec. 2.—"The light has just begun. This is only the first chapter. What we want to find out is who were the men behind the McNamara's, and this we purpose to do." This statement was made by Walter Drew, chief counsel for the National Erectors' Association which employed William J. Burns and his detectives to investigate the dynamite case. The McNamara's, in pleading guilty, have said they were sent out there and acted for a principle.

It is obvious the men representing this principle have kept them well supplied with money. It is to find out who these men are that become the important issue from now on, stated
Mr. Drew. He emphasized the importance of the federal investigation now under way at Indianapolis.

To Be Considered.
Troy, N. Y., Dec. 2.—That the confession of the McNamara brothers will be considered at a meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor at its meeting in Washington on January 8, next, was the opinion expressed today by President Samuel Gompers, who came here from New York today.

Came As A Surprise.
Pueblo, Colo., Dec. 2.—Francis J.
Honey of San Francisco, special prosecutor of "graft" cases there several years ago, addressing the Pueblo teachers here last night said that while he knew the McNamara's were guilty, the confession came as a surprise to him.

"Detective Burns explained to me in Chicago what evidence he had," said Honey, "and asked me that in the event of his murder, which he expected would be his portion for so viciously prosecuting the brothers and accomplices, I might know who did it and prosecute them."

"Betrayed Confidence."
Washington, Dec. 2.—Secretary
Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, issued a statement today declaring that the McNamara brothers had "betrayed the confidence of organized labor, which believed the innocent and that they should receive punishment commensurate with the crime."

Great Blow.
Washington, Dec. 2.—Victor Berger, the socialist member of congress, in discussing the McNamara question today, described it as "The greatest blow that has ever come to the Communist school of socialism. This school never wanted to abolish capitalism and to introduce socialism," he said. "All the 'pure and simple' wants is to add a few cents a day to the workers' wages, and not hoping much from the future. An independent, political action—desperate characters really turned to desperate acts."

Sees Lesson.
"This case will teach the 'pure and simple' that the balance is infinitely more powerful than the dynamite bomb. As for the McNamara's they are also victims of the class struggle and while their acts are indefensible, it may not be amiss to point out that capitalism is killing and maiming hundreds of thousands in the mines, railroads and factories, without the fact receiving passing notice."

Additional sums have been received less than the subscription list, this is accounted for by the fact that several who have subscribed have thus far failed to mail their checks to the treasurer of the fund. The receipts

CONSOLIDATION OF COUNTRY SCHOOLS FAVORED BY LOWTH

Training School News.

In speaking of the small attendance at some of the district schools of the county Principal F. J. Lowth of the Rock County Teachers' Training School makes the following statement:
"It is a fact for the farmers to allow such ridiculously small country schools. There are several schools in Rock County with only a handful of boys and girls—three, six, eight or ten. It does not pay to run such small schools."

"Consolidation and transportation is the only remedy and it has been proved in this and other states to be a practical remedy, too. The state department encourages this method of solving the problem, but there seems to be a great deal of opposition to the plan on the part of those who would be directly and greatly benefitted."

Training School Notes.
Miss Buckmaster has placed upon the board some sketches which add to the appearance of the room, and which are suggestive of what may be done if one has the ability and the practice.

We are beginning to understand that school houses should be used more than they are, and for the education of the adults of the community as well as the children. Hence our discussion of Farmers' Clubs and of the school as a social center. With prejudice and unreasonable opposition removed there is a bright future for the farm community.

Miss Jacobson is spending her vacation at her home near Elkhorn.
Miss Wilder went to Milwaukee on Wednesday afternoon.
Miss Sands has experienced a good deal of pain and inconvenience with her sprained ankle.

Mr. Lowth expects to test the eyes and ears of all the students of the training school in the next two weeks.
The four-day Thanksgiving vacation affords a wholesome period of relaxation for the students.

E. A. Cleveland, editor of the Ho-list Daily News and treasurer of a write-up in his paper on Wednes-

Doctor Williams spoke to our young women Monday forenoon, and her remarks were practical and full of good advice for the girls in the way of

WISCONSIN BARLEY GETS HIGH AWARDS AT BREWERS' SHOW

OUT OF SIX GROWERS IN STATE TWO ARE LEADERS IN WORLD'S COMPETI-TION.

HONORS TO LOCAL MAN

A. Austin Who Resides on Milton Avenue Is Close Second to H. E.
Krueger of Beaver Dam, Wis.

Wisconsin barley ranks the best in the world according to the decision of the brewers' experts at the international brewers' exposition which has just closed at the Coliseum at Chicago.

In the brewers' test Wisconsin barley took first and second over the best exhibits from Germany and the old barley growing countries of the world, first prize going to H. E.
Krueger of Beaver Dam and second to A. Austin of this city.

The points given to the barley exhibited by Mr. Krueger total 10, while Mr. Austin's grain came within half a point of the first place or 15 1/2 points.

Mr. Austin owns two farms on Milton avenue near the city. He raises in the neighborhood of 75 acres of barley a year which yielded last season 35 bushels per acre. He raises the pedigreed Odebrecker six rowed barley which he received from the state experiment station at Madison.

Of all the exhibitors of barley at the exposition there were only six from Wisconsin, two of whom were accorded the first two places demonstrating beyond a question of doubt that Wisconsin is the best barley-growing country in the world. The awards were made on the chemical analysis made by students in the brewers' school.

Following these awards made to Wisconsin grain European and foreign buyers have already demanded 50,000 bushels of barley for seed purposes. It is now planned to instruct the farmers in the state in the improved methods of barley culture in order to keep the place which has been awarded to it and to encourage growing of this crop more extensively.
Mr. Austin is optimistic regarding the prospects in Rock county and hopes that a larger number of farmers will become interested in the growing of the pedigreed grain.

Emperor Francis Joseph Celebrates Anniversary of His Accession—Receives Many Guests.

Vienna, Dec. 2.—Special services of thanksgiving were held throughout the empire today in celebration of the sixty-third anniversary of the ac-

Greetings from many parts of the world were received by the venerable emperor, who passed the day in accordance with the simple routine that has marked his life for many years.
The health of his majesty is reported to be satisfactory, though the fact that he is feeling the weight of his years and can no longer indulge in the hunting expeditions and other recreations that served to lighten the burden of his domestic sorrows can no longer be denied. He appears very rarely in public nowadays and during the past year he has frequently been confined to his apartments for days at a time.

The next round in the battle is scheduled for one month from today, when the defendants must file in court an answer to the allegations of the Government. Unless there are demonstrations this should comprise the pleading. Next will come the appoint-been taken, filed and read by the court the case will be placed on the calendar for argument and the procedure will be the same as in the oil

Nanking, China, Dec. 2.—The revolutionary forces took possession of the city this morning after a parley with the imperial government forces who were in occupation at mid-day while the white flag was displayed on Lion's Fort inside the walls to the northwest indicating the gunners had joined the revolutionary leader, Gen. Li Yun-Hong, who had captured Tiger Fort a few days ago and occupied Shun-Kwang, a town on the banks of the river outside the city of Nanking.
Thereupon the warships under command of Admiral Sah which had hitherto lain two miles down the river, cautiously approached and took up a position under the guns of Lion's Hill of the revolutionary forces, took the terms of capitulation of the entire city.

themselves to be revolutionists are band of 300 Russians armed with machine guns have demanded enrollment at Amoy, but leaders there refused to accept them and the men are now threatening to cause trouble.

LAST OF MONETARY MEETINGS ARE HELD

National Monetary Commission Hear-

On Proposed Legislation.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—The National Monetary commission today closed upon its final series of meetings to get the opinions of men versed in financial matters on the proposed reform of the banking and currency of the country. The addresses and discussions at the recent convention of the American Bankers' Association in New Orleans reflected what is believed to be the prevailing views of the national bankers, particularly with reference to the proposed National Reserve Association, which is intended to be a great unification of the credit of the banking institutions of the nation. The commission still desires, however, to give all interested persons an opportunity to present their opinions before the commission concludes its deliberations and incorporates its findings in the form of a bill to be introduced in congress.

SENATOR CUMMINS TO INTRODUCE BILL FOR DIRECT PRIMARIES

Measure To Provide For Popular Nomination Of Presidential Candidates Paralels Post Opposition.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 2.—Senator Cummins of Iowa announced today that he would introduce a bill providing for presidential primaries early in the campaign season. The bill would direct the holding of primary elections in each state at which the electors of both parties could announce their preference for presidential candidate. The bill would fix August 1 of next year as the time for the first primary and if it should prevail nothing would be left to the next convention except the forming of platform and arranging the machinery of the national committee. It would provide for a direct vote for the presidential candidate in each party and also for electors. "I think that the general situation would be much changed if we could get a primary law," he said, but he was not in a position to predict an outcome of his efforts in that direction.

Retailers Oppose Paralels Post.
Opposition to a national parcels post on the ground that it will drive out the small retailers and establish the grip of the mail order business in all small communities was voiced today by John A. Green, secretary of the national association of retail grocers. Mr. Green from personal mittee on postoffices and post roads of the senate that few small merchandisers could survive competition from the great city stores. He said a national parcels post would not be of general benefit to the country.

Next To The Presentation Of Gifts

The Greatest Pleasures of the Christmas Season Comes From the Early Selection of Gifts.

Needless delay makes gift buying a burdensome task—a series of vexing, tiresome and quite frequently, disappointing experiences. Many find excuse for such delay in the idea that they must be in the crowds to enjoy full measure of the spirit of the season.

The real Christmas spirit lives in the far-sighted shopper who comes to the 'last week or' ten days before Christmas with all gifts ready for presentation. They possess that great pleasure of satisfaction that follows the knowledge that in each gift the right selection was made—chosen with ample time and intelligent.

Much of the real joy of gift-giving is lost in the hurried selection and immediate presentation. So let us again emphasize the importance of early Christmas shopping.

This store has successfully developed new ideas in men's holiday merchandise. Good taste is everywhere in evidence.

Scout Master Bookout Issues Call for Increased Membership—'Should Be at Least Three Hundred,' He Says.

"Janesville should have at least three hundred Boy Scouts," is the statement of Scout Master L. E. Bookout, who announced today that he planned to open a campaign at once to increase the membership in the local organization.

There are over seventy boys enrolled in the local Scout organization at present, which is about the same number that were members several months ago. Now that the movement is so well started in this city it is the opinion of Mr. Bookout that there should be a substantial increase in the membership. It was the plan at the time of organization to limit the number of boys in order to secure a working nucleus and gain a more effective organization. Several new candidates have been received within the past week and others have announced their intention of becoming members.

To all candidates or those wishing to join the local organization, Mr. Bookout extends the invitation to come to see him at any time at the Gazette office and he will gladly map out the work which is required. Scouts also are requested to come at any time to discuss matters of importance.

Meeting Last Night.

The Scouts met at the Spanish War Veterans' hall yesterday afternoon at five o'clock to receive instructions and drill. It was announced that several of the "Tenderfoot" were beginning the necessary work to become Second Class Scouts.

Heart to Heart Talks.

THE QUALITY OF MERCY.

Do you remember in Victor Hugo's story of "Les Miserables" how for years Inspector Javert pursued Jean Valjean, who had stolen a loaf of bread for a starving sister?

Well, here is a modern instance. Javert put Jean Valjean into the galleys and pursued him because of his stern sense of official duty, but the persecutor in this modern story had no such excuse.

William F. Delmege, a New York butcher, is the Javert of the tale, and Jacob F. Helitz is the poor delinquent whom Delmege hounded.

The story runs thus: Years ago Helitz pleaded guilty to stealing some meat from his employer. Since that time he has not only lived an honest life, but has worked hard to support his own family and also four children of a dead brother.

Wherever Helitz went Delmege followed, sooner or later told about the theft and secured the discharge of the unfortunate man.

Discouraged by his struggle against these odds, Helitz had Delmege arrested for breach of the peace. The latter admitted to the judge he had secured the discharge of Helitz three different times.

He said he thought it was "his duty" to do so.

"Did you know this man was leading an honest life?" asked the magistrate.

"No," said Delmege. "Whereupon the court grew indignant. 'Is there then no such thing as penance or mercy? Must the door of opportunity be everywhere slammed in this poor man's face? I will put you under bonds of $1,000 to keep the peace as to this matter.'"

In default of bail Delmege went to jail.

Oh, just judge! Helitz, like Jean Valjean, was redeeming his life. And every time he tried to get his head above water Delmege pushed him under.

"The quality of mercy is not strained."

The pitiless Javert of Hugo's story, torn in his desire between the call of duty and the call of mercy, had the grace to drown himself.

This modern Javert, with no sworn oath to support, showed no bowels of mercy and deserved none.

Fires of Buffalo Chips.

On the plains where wood was unknown buffalo chips supplied the camp fire that cooked the meals of the plainsmen. The old time prospector with his wagon and mules, carried with him on the plains a store of blocks sawed from a 2 by 6 plank. When meal time came he chopped a block into many small pieces, lit his fire, cooked his bacon and boiled his tea or coffee, all of which he succeeded in doing successfully by proper management.

The Folks From Maine.

The governor of Maine was at the school and was telling the pupils what the people of different states were called. "Now," he said, "the people from Indiana are called Hoosiers; the people from North Carolina Tar Heels; the people from Michigan we know as Michiganders. Now, what little boy or girl can tell me what the people of Maine are called?" "I know," said a little girl. "Well, what are we called?" asked the governor. "Mainers."—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

UNITED DOCTORS MAKE FREE OFFER

NOTED SPECIALISTS WILL CURE ACCEPTED CASES FREE OF CHARGE UNTIL DEC 20th.

DO IT TO PROVE CURES

The Only Charge to Any Patient Is Simply Cost of Medicines Used.

Free examination, free consultation and free treatment until you are entirely well. Such is the generous offer made by the United Doctors to all patients accepted for treatment before Dec. 20th. The only charge that will be made is for the medicines used, which must be paid cash. To very poor patients the medicines will be furnished free also.

The object of the United Doctors making this grand free offer is to secure a few supposedly incurable cases quickly to demonstrate the tremendous curative powers of this wonderful new system of medicine as used by the United Doctors. These specialists select one or two of the most difficult cases from each locality in order to show what can be done by this new, scientific treatment, even in the worst forms of diseases.

The treatment used by the United Doctors is non-surgical. They never use the knife; never mutilate the body which God built in His image. Only the best and purest of drugs and chemicals are used by these specialists, their motto being that every sick person is entitled to the best medicines that are to be found in nature regardless of cost. To obtain pure drugs they prepare all of their medicines in their own laboratory, and thus every patient is assured a pure medicine, the best obtainable regardless of cost.

The expensive instruments used in diagnosis and the extreme care used in securing pure drugs and preparing them especially for each case, makes the treatment used by the United Doctors more expensive than ordinary treatment, yet the large number of patients treated makes it possible to place the price of treatment within reach of all.

This is really a very remarkable and generous offer by these great specialists. It is an offer of free treatment until well, regardless of the length of time. This offer is good only in cases accepted for treatment before Dec. 20th. After that date full regular fees will be charged for all.

Consultation and examination is free to all, but only curable cases will be accepted for treatment. If your case is incurable you will be told so and not a penny of your money accepted. However, many cases that are incurable by old methods can be quickly cured by this wonderful new treatment of the United Doctors. The United Doctors' Institute is located on the fourth floor of the Hayes Bldg., corner of Main and Milwaukee st. The elevator takes everyone to the door.

The Institute will be open to receive patients Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. No patients will be seen before Tuesday.

Old People Everywhere Say

Pe-ru-na is Good for Coughs, Colds and Catarrhal Diseases.

Mrs. JOHN O. ATKINSON

Pe-ru-na Relieves Chronic Case.

Mr. John O. Atkinson, 1359 N. Emporia Ave., Wichita, Kan., writes of his wife's case: "My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past twenty-five years. Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"I wrote to you about her case. You prescribed a course of Pe-ru-na and Almagin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for these wonderful remedies."

Suffered Forty-five Years.

Mr. J. R. Prince, R. R. 1, Tuckahoe, N. Y., writes: "I am not very well satisfied with the picture that I am sending you, but when the reader looks at this picture if he could only realize that the original suffered for forty-five years, the best of his life, until your kind advice and prescription cured him, he would know from whence these wrinkles came. Next month I shall be sixty-six years old."

Nervous Prostration.

Mrs. Martha Avery, 28 Graham St., Lowell, Mass., writes:

"Four years ago I had nervous prostration. I employed several DOCTORS and doctors. One would say I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels, another nervousness and another enlargement of the liver. My stomach was in a bad shape. There was nothing which seemed to do me much good. I tried other remedies, but did not gain any flesh, until I commenced taking your Pe-ru-na, which built me right up. I have taken several bottles, but have not taken any now for about six weeks.

Feels Ten Years Younger.

Mr. Henry Merz, 1624 Upper Mt. Vernon Road, Evansville, Ind., writes:

"When I first wrote to you I had brought trouble for four years, and had tried several doctors, but they could do me no good. I had pain and rattling in the chest, cough, expectoration, especially at night.

"I am seventy-three years old. I that I am entirely well. I feel ten years younger since I began using Pe-ru-na. I recommend YEARS Pe-ru-na to all my friends for OLD I was in bad condition.

REDS TAKE TWO FROM GREYS LAST EVENING

Reds Win Last Game by One Point—Cardinals Planning to Hold Championship.

In one of the most exciting matches which has been pulled off in some time the Reds won two games from the Greys last evening at Hockett's alleys. After the Greys had overrun the Reds in the first game by nearly a hundred points and the Reds had taken a big brace, winning the next game by about eighty points, the two teams started in on the last game with the determination to win or die in the attempt. The spectators there began to take a lively interest in the outcome and every ball was watched by the entire company. The evenness of the bowling in the last game will be evident when it is seen that the Reds won by one point.

Cook of the Greys rolled high score rolling 192 in the first game. He also bowled the highest score for the three games, making a total of 555 points altogether. Both teams were in fairly good form and the spirit with which they went into the contest made it doubly interesting to the spectators. The Cardinals still hold the lead and if they can defeat the Reds on Monday next their title to the championship will be practically sound, and it will remain with the rest to determine who will hold the next places in line. Last night's scores and line-ups were as follows:

GREYS.
Cook, Capt.	192	181
Campbell	140	131
P. Griddle	139	111
Caple	102	140
Breen	141	166
Total	774	729

REDS.
Craft, Capt.	132	183
Huckelsh	120	168
E. Baumann	143	158
Osell	144	171
Sutherland	140	130
Total	679	810

STANDINGS OF THE TEAMS.

	Won.	Lost.	Per Ct.
Cardinals	16	8	.667
Greys	14	10	.583
Reds	13	11	.542
Blues	12	12	.500
Browns	10	14	.417
Maroons	7	17	.292

This shows that the Cardinals, Greys and Reds hold first, second and third places respectively in the tournament now stands. By defeating the Greys yesterday the Reds placed themselves third in order and the Blues were put down to fourth. The Maroons still hold last place, having won but seven out of twenty-four games played so far. A few more exciting contests are expected in this tournament before the big one starts and a good match will probably be pulled off Monday night when the Cardinals play the Reds.

JUNIOR TEAM DEFEATS EVANSVILLE Y. M. C. A.

Locals Outplayed Opponents at All Times Winning by Score of Forty Three to Fifteen. Thanksgiving afternoon the local Y.

M. C. A. Junior basketball team defeated the Y. M. C. A. of Evansville, by a score of 42 to 15 in the Janesville building. A large number of spectators witnessed the game which was very well played as well as fast. McKelgo played the star game for Janesville making ten field goals and one free throw, his opponent making but four free throws. McKelgo and Blackney also showed up very well for the locals, while Ryan and McKaffery were there to back up the team. Altogether it was a walk away for the Janesville boys who not only outplayed their opponents but outplayed them all around.

James Forbes play "The Chorus Lady" in which Rose Stahl starred for several seasons was presented at the Myers Theater last evening by a capable company. The play which portrays some of the troubles which beset the chorus girl, was presented in a realistic manner and the leading parts were taken in a clever manner. The lesson of the play was brought out in such a pleasing and sympathetic way.

SEASON BEGINNING FOR INDOOR SPORTS

Basket Ball, Hand Ball, and Bowling Now the Important Items on Fans' List.

From Thanksgiving on the winter sports in the city begin to be pulled off in real earnest. All of the basketball teams have played one game except the Y. M. C. A. The bowling teams are getting into form for the big matches to be held next month and the other forms of entertainment are increasing rapidly as the winter sets in.

While no dates have been set as yet for games between the local Y and the three teams which are agreed to meet them they will be arranged as soon as they get into form and improve their working condition. Prospect, Milton College and Evansville Y. M. C. A. each want to play a series of three games with the Janesville team and it is thought that this will be possible. Beloit Y also wants a game and if dates can be fixed up they will probably be taken on by the local five. Thursday morning the Evansville Y. M. C. A. Juniors were badly beaten by the local Juniors in a fast and interesting game. Probably the first team will have a game within a few weeks. Under the coaching of Captain Kopp regular work has been begun and hard practice will be needed for a while to put the team in shape.

Seven teams of hand ball players have been working out for several weeks and there are at present twenty-eight regular players and the courts are very popular both with business men and high school students.

As the football season has drawn to a successful close and the indoor sports are taking the main place in the athletic calendar the Lokotas have scheduled their first game for this season to be played this week with the All Stars. Both teams are in excellent condition and an exciting game is expected. The Lokotas are planning to carry out their postponed schedule as soon as they can get away and their trip through Iowa will be watched by local fans with a great deal of interest.

Much interest is being drawn to the bowling contests as they draw to a close and the progress of the Greys as they try to dislodge the Cardinals from their seemingly solid foothold is being watched by a large number of people. The real contest will be started shortly after Christmas and this preliminary series of matches only helps to get the teams in shape. At the high school football has dropped from the course of events and the boys will probably rust up for a week or so before starting basketball as they have had a very strenuous season this year and deserve a vacation. Prospects for basketball are very good and with a little hard practice it is thought that a very fair team can be developed.

CARDINALS TO PLAY ALL STARS TONIGHT

Cardinals Will Open Season With Contest Against All Stars Tonight at Rink.

In the sporting events for tonight the basketball game between the Cardinals and the All Stars, both local teams, is the most important. These teams have both been putting in a lot of hard practice lately and are in fine condition for the match tonight. Neither five has played a game so far this season and it is not known how they will stack up against each other in this evening's contest. Several good players have been billed for the game on both sides and while the Cardinals have the reputation for being an extra fine team the All Stars intend to show that they too have the right to be called a basketball team.

Tonight's lineup will probably be as follows:

Cardinals	All Stars
Cunningham	C. F.
Murphy	Koch
Langdon	L. F.
Green	Korst
Edler	Wilkinson
Brown	Edler
	L. G.
	Brown

The game will be called at nine o'clock as usual and a large crowd is expected will attend the opening game of the season for both the Cardinals and the All Stars.

The Maxwell Mercury a mile-a-minute roadster

LAST year the Maxwell Sportsman made a great hit—everyone was talking about it.

This year, it's succeeded by the Maxwell Mercury—which cannot fail to create a sensation.

The Sportsman sold fully equipped for $1400. We are selling the Maxwell Mercury for $1150 (top extra).

The difference represents another instance of the Maxwell policy—to divide savings through economies with the purchaser—economies effected by larger production and co-operative organization.

The value of the car is extraordinary.

It is a mile-a-minute roadster, test-proven and efficient, swift, stylish, dependable—and economical like all Maxwell cars. That is what the reputation of the 47,000 Maxwells in use is founded on.

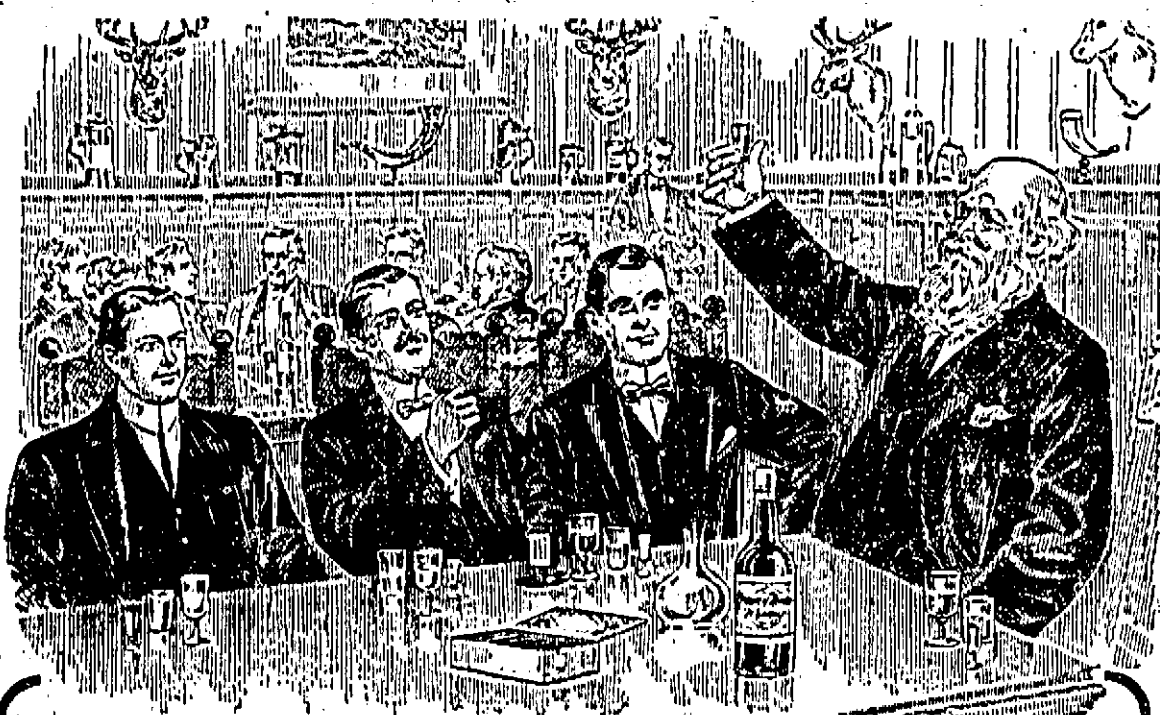

Study the lines of the car in the cut—note the flush-side, ventilated, vestibuled, fore-door body. See the car and observe the finish—easily the best appointed car made.

Note the new Columbia Honeycomb type radiator and the new design hood. It's equipped with high-tension racing magneto and high speed carburetor, with demountable rims and a wealth of other refinements.

But don't depend on descriptions to judge the car. Come in and see it. Then go and compare it with other cars. Comparison will prove our contention better than any argument which we can offer on paper. We will be glad to have you ride in it. Phone or write today for an appointment.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Definite work is not always that which is cut and squared for us, but that which comes as a claim upon the conscience, whether its nursing in a hospital or hemming a handkerchief. —Elizabeth M. Sewell.

The work program of every day life is usually so well defined that the most of us give no thought in adjusting ourselves to it. The man in the shop goes to his daily toll, week in and week out, with clock like regularity, usually contented and happy because of employment, without a break.

The picnic and the occasional holiday come to him as a breathing spell, but if they lasted for a month, rather than a day he would be most miserable, and so on through the world of industry the daily routine, though monotonous contributes largely to welfare and happiness.

The man in business may start the day a little later, but he knows nothing about the clock or the whistle, except as his wife reminds him that the dinner has been cold for half an hour and suggests that a divorce and a new cook will be in order if he don't reform.

The dull round of housework day after day and year after year, is the common lot of the wife and mother, and the heaviest of her environment, but she is a choice kingdom over which she presides with loving care, and the monotony is rarely considered irksome.

The average life is lived along uniform lines, and the daily routine is seldom broken. Death in the home, or failure in business, or loss of occupation through accident, may disturb our plans, but we soon adjust ourselves to new conditions and the drama goes on until the home is deserted by the children, who have gone out to find their niche, and occupy it, and then the old place looks as it has for half a century, and is much the same except for the loneliness.

Some of these ancient land marks tell a pathetic story, which is like a romance to the new generation, who regard them as relics of the past. The solo survivor in one substantial old fashioned house which was a palace fifty years ago, is a sweet faced old lady, who came to the home as a bride before the war. The news of President Lincoln's assassination turned the tenth wedding anniversary from an occasion of joy to a season of mourning.

Back in the years so long ago, the house was filled with young people and the home was noted for hospitality and good cheer. For a quarter of a century the daily routine of life caused the years to speed by with happy content and then, one by one members of the household dropped out, until all were gone except the woman, who came to the home as a bride more than half a century ago.

No tragedy which startled the community in that kind of a life, but a series of tragedies, incident to the wayfarer who journeys on beyond allotted time, waiting in the shadow drawing inspiration from sacred memories, and looking into the unknown with confidence born of hope and sustained by sublime faith.

An old farmer came into the office a time ago and said "There's nothing the matter with me other mentally or physically, but I am seventy-five years old and ready to die. For more than fifty years my wife and I have lived on the old farm, our children are scattered over half a dozen states. Our neighbors have taken the places of old time friends and the monotonous life has lost its charm."

This man was ready to quit and longing to go and he represents a class of pioneers who share the same sentiment, the daily routine of an uneventful life had become tiresome, and he longed for the other realm of existence, which at least could not be far in advance.

Many people who have reached the age of this old veteran are scarred with the marks of the conflict, that bodies are wracked with pain, and the step is faltering and weary. The eye is dim and the ear fails to respond to the touch of sound and evidences are not lacking to show that the casket is wrecked and ready to be cast aside.

This class of people do not endorse very heartily that paragraph in the apostles creed which reads: "I believe in the resurrection of the body," for their experience with the frail tenement, during the last lap of the journey is not very satisfactory, and they have no desire to renew acquaintance with it in the life beyond.

The monotony of every day life in a community is sometimes broken by a catastrophe so startling in character, and so disastrous in results that we are shaken out of the shell from which we rarely escape and forget for a time the little things that tend to make us selfish and narrow.

The little garden spot in which we live is recently disturbed by one of nature's most violent outbreaks and thousands of dormant lives, self-centered and busily engrossed with the daily routine of existence, come to the rescue of our brothers and sisters in the hour of need.

This spirit which was quick to recognize a common brotherhood, was not confined to any class but touched the heart of humanity at every point, one man who works for moderate wages came in with five dollars and said, "that represents half a week's living, but my wife and I talked it over last night and decided that we could afford to make some sacrifice."

That's giving till you feel it, and thousands of dollars of this kind of money has come in to swell the relief fund, during the past two weeks, men in the shops and girls in the stores and factories have responded generously and the fifty families, which have been added, up to the present time, are filled with good cheer in their misfortune. Because the people they never knew, so cheerfully came to their relief.

If it were possible for every contributor to visit this storm swept district, they would be amply repaid for the investment of money and supplies. One home which was completely wiped out was occupied by a man and his wife. When the storm struck the house they were sitting in the dining room. A moment later the man crawled out from the wreck, a badly bruised but anxious for his wife. Presently she appeared apparently alright. He said to her, "Mary are you hurt?" and she said "no" and then fell to the ground dead. "The shock had been too much for her."

His first thought was to ring the bell which hung on the wall until frame and then he discovered that the mill, the home and all the buildings had disappeared. Then he started across the field to a neighbor, wading through water knee deep covered with blood he stumbled into the house and told his story. That's a tragedy out of the ordinary and one of the incidents of many thrilling experiences, which so aroused human sympathy.

The storm sufferers have buried their dead, and in time the wrecked home will be cleared away, but the married forer will long also silent evidence of the fury of the blast which leveled everything in its path. The multitude of generous hearted people, who responded to the call for help so promptly will settle back to the old routine of every day life, performing its homely duties with old time faithfulness, yet not the same people, because the bond of a common brotherhood has been strengthened by the experiences through which they have passed and out of those experiences will come a deeper sense of appreciation through the two fold blessing of giving and receiving.

The every day life is crowded full of work and responsibility, but the heart possesses a wonderful capacity and when stirred to the depths, every faculty of mind and body becomes a willing servant to the best.

The God who permitted the storm brought comfort to the sorrowing and aid to the sufferers, not in any supernatural way, but through the only agency which represents Him, human hearts and human hands, and He will pronounce it "well done."

The work in which so many have been engaged during the past two weeks was prompted by the heart. It has been an unselfish work, but no thought of reward either here or hereafter.

THE DYNAMITERS.

The confusion of the McNamara's at Los Angeles yesterday afternoon brings to an abrupt ending one of the most sensational trials on record. Detective Burns knew what he was about and the history of the case from the time he commenced to shadow the men, until the day of arrest shows that he made no mistake.

"That organized labor has been deceived," is evidence by the fabulous amount of money so cheerfully contributed for the defense of the criminals for it was expected that the trial would last for months.

While criticism will be freely offered and opinion as freely denounced, yet the fact remains that organized labor is not responsible for this great crime. It is seriously handicapped however by bartering with its ranks a class of men who are anarchists pure and simple, and who regard the destruction of life and property as their peculiar mission.

These men have no right as American citizenship, and organized labor should enforce an oath of allegiance strong enough to bar them from its ranks. "The story of Detective Burns should be read by every man who is in any way inclined to sympathize with the self convicted men."

A month after the Times building was blown up the younger McNamara went to Los Angeles to dynamite the Auxiliary plant of the Times Company. He found the building too closely guarded, and as he wanted to do something his outfit was used to blow up the Iron Works Plant.

Samuel Gompers says that he was deceived and had every confidence that the men were innocent, and no one doubts his word, but Clarence Darrow was not deceived. He had charge of the defense, and has long known that his clients were guilty, and yet he has permitted organized labor all over the country to raise money to express sympathy for a crime, which all good citizens abhor. Union labor will survive the shock, but if it regains public confidence, some radical changes will be necessary and some of its leaders will find it advisable to retire.

MILD WEATHER WITH HIGH TEMPERATURES

Long Spell of Moderate to High Temperatures Predicted for Present Month by Foster Weather Bureau.

(Copyrighted, 1911, by W. T. Foster.) Last week's gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent Nov. 30 to Dec. 6 to 10, warm waves Nov. 23 to Dec. 3 and Dec. 5 to 9, cool waves Dec. 2 to 6 and 8 to 12. The average temperatures of the twelve days covering the above described disturbances was expected to be below normal and to include two rain waves crossing continent Dec. 2 to 6 and 8 to 12.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Dec. 10, cross Pacific slope by close of 11, great central valleys 12 to 14, eastern sections 16. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 10, great central valleys 12, eastern sections 14. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 13, great central valleys 16, eastern sections 17.

The important features of this disturbance will be a great rise in temperatures, and the inauguration of a long spell of moderate to high temperatures, not much rain or snow but otherwise severe and threatening weather. The cool wave will not go to very low temperatures.

The annual gathering of the scientists of all America occurs at Washington, D. C., Dec. 27. Many eminent men of science will be here and many important discussions of scientific matters are expected. It may appear strange, but it is true, that men who have accomplished most in the way of inventions and discoveries have had little to do with scientific societies, probably because they are seldom in line with orthodox scientists and are too busy for society work. Herbert Spencer and Edison are samples of the great scientists who have little to do with the scientific organizations.

The Carnegie Institution recently published a valuable work on sunspot observations and this suggests the great importance of the sunspot question. My forecast of new sun spots, to be seen near Nov. 9, proves to have been good. The spots were observed by Prof. Merrill, director of Santa Clara, California observatory, on Nov. 9. The spots were a little southward of center of the sun. If scientists knew the causes of sun spots it would revolutionize all sciences that are related to the physical forces and our national weather bureau would be compelled to rebuild the foundations of its work.

Crop weather is expected to continue favorable to winter grain. In those favorable to spring wheat country the soil will thaw in the spring with the abundance of moisture and this will go far toward insuring a good crop next year. But I advise not to be in a hurry about selling any kind of grain, cotton or flax seed. If you have land wheat keep it.

Some people are trying to get up a financial scare or panic but they will probably not succeed. They have already caused some depression but the great forces will not forget the power of the American voter. One more financial panic would make this country a bad place for panic makers to live and they will surely think it over before bringing another break. I do not believe we will get another great financial depression for many years.

Stop That Cough In a Minute

Would you give morphine or chloroform to your baby or take it yourself?

Of course not. Yet most patent cough cures contain one or both. They stop a cough in a minute, which is dangerous. A cough should be cured internally by healing the lungs, loosening the phlegm, throwing it out, which is done by coughing. Badger Cough Balsam does not contain morphine or chloroform. It is made by perspiration from bloodroot, lobelia, pine bark, wild cherry, etc. It cures a cough in a few days without filling the lungs with poisonous phlegm. The irritation is relieved, the lungs healed without danger of pneumonia. It's safe for children or old people. Get a bottle today for 25 cents. Badger Cough Balsam is made by Mr. F. F. Badger, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist. Badger Drug Co., Milwaukee and River streets.

FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY WAS THANKSGIVING DAY

MR. AND MRS. JOHN LITTLE CELE-BRATED GOLDEN WEDDING DAY WITH FAMILY RE-UNION.

WERE EARLY SETTLERS

Both Came to Rock County Over Fifty Years Ago From Scotland—Have Been Prominent Residents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Little celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Thanksgiving day with a family reunion at their home four miles west of the city on the Magnolia road in the town of Janesville. The occasion was a happy one as all the members of the family were present and enjoyed a bountiful Thanksgiving and wedding dinner.

There were twenty-nine members of the family present including the children and grandchildren. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little, son and daughter, of La Prairie;
Mr. and Mrs. James R. Duthie and daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Duthie of Avalon; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Little and daughter of Janesville; Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Dalton and three sons of Clinton; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Korn and son and daughter, Janesville;
Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Smith, three sons and two daughters; and Miss Margaret Little who resides with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Little were married in La Prairie Nov. 30, 1861. Since that time they have resided in the town of Janesville where Mr. Little has been extensively engaged in farming and has been interested in the breeding of pure blooded cattle, horses and sheep. Through his efforts he has done much to improve the standard of the stock in his neighborhood as well as in Rock county.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Little are of Scottish birth but have resided in this county for fifty years. Mr. Little was born in Hawick, Scotland, eighty-two years ago. He came to this country with his parents and brothers in 1853.
They came direct to Rock county where they settled on the farm where
Mr. and Mrs. Little now live.

Mr. Little was formerly Miss Jane
Scott, and was born in Dumfries, Scotland, Aug. 10, 1811. She came to Rock county with her parents in June 1857, and resided with them on a farm in the town of La Prairie until her marriage, fifty years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Little are in good health in spite of their rather advanced years and continue to enjoy their farm home, taking active interest in all the various details of the work. They have a large number of friends throughout the county who unite in extending congratulations and who wish them continued years of health and prosperity.

K-R-I-T CARS TO FOREIGN PARTS

Big Export Trade Built Up on Fame and Catalog.

The fame of the K-R-I-T has become unusually widespread in foreign countries. A shipment of 50 cars to Great Britain has just been made from the Detroit factory, and 33 other K-R-I-Ts have been sent to other foreign shores including France, Germany, Belgium, Russia, Australia, Brazil and the Argentines.
"It is really astounding," said Assistant General Manager H. H. Crawford, of the K-R-I-T Motor Car Co., "to observe the sudden popularity of the K-R-I-T has gained among foreign natives. Dealers five and ten thousand miles away have ordered cars in large quantities simply from the catalog.
Now that the K-R-I-T cars are beginning to be known more and more in foreign countries, the demand has reached unusual importance, considering that we have never been able to push our foreign trade on account of never being caught up with domestic shipments."

Don't Let a Lack of Training Cripple Your Prospects For a Successful Future

EVERY PARENT SHOULD READ THIS ANNOUNCEMENT AND CONSIDER IT FOR THEIR SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

Present day business methods have worked the undoing of the untrained man. But the world offers great prizes to men who can DO THINGS. With the present great prosperity, expansion of business, and establishing of new enterprises, there is a work for all who are willing to work and are capable of doing what this pushing, practical and progressive age requires done. Those who are content to do the drudgery of the world must be content with the pay common place service commands. But those who aspire to be something more than mere competitors of machines and wish to reap the rewards that are given for efficient brain service, must have their brain powers CULTIVATED AND DEVELOPED. You must have your mind TRAINED for the kind of service that the world is willing to reward. And so, young man, young woman

NOW IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

The prizes of life are yours to enjoy if you get out and hustle for them. The world is every day asking for the service of young people TRAINED FOR BUSINESS. This training can be had at SMALL EXPENSE; it can be learned by anyone with a common school education; the START is within the reach of all, high or low, rich or poor; the only natural fitness you need is HONESTY AND WORK; that you CAN SUCCEED to competence is beyond a doubt though you might fail in every other line of work. You will be paid for WHAT YOU KNOW not for WHAT YOU DO. We have taken hundreds of young men and women, trained them along the lines of business and then placed them at $40, $45 and $75 a month and in a few months we see them drawing salaries of $100 to $150 a month.

After working for almost 20 busy, hard-thinking years in this line of business, don't you think our experience ought to be worth heeding? Take our word for it that

W. W. DALE, President.

A Business Education Will Cost You Less and Pay You More Than Any Other Kind

Don't go on "hearsay" but investigate this matter for yourself. There are opportunities in the business world you never dreamed of. Why take chances in some other line of work? A talent to succeed in anything will pay you tenfold more in business.

But your success is going to be determined in a large measure by the "START"—the school in which you secure your training. All schools are not alike in this respect; no more than all stores are alike. HIGH QUALITY OF WORK AND STANDARDS OF GRADUATION are confined to too few business schools.
The importance of securing your training from competent men can not be too strongly emphasized. One young man only a short time ago attended a neighboring school to study shorthand. After spending almost five months he decided to enroll with us and found that our students of 3 months had much more ability to write shorthand than he. He had been allowed to make poor notes; had many outlines incorrect and thus could hardly read much of what he wrote. He says: "The habits I acquired on first taking shorthand are almost impossible to break and I feel that my ability as a stenographer has been seriously handicapped."

Our long experience in business college work has shown us how to present every subject to the prospective students so that no time may be wasted and the greatest efficiency produced. We are the only school in Southern Wisconsin that is affiliated with the Wisconsin Commercial Educators' association, the highest standard of Business Education in the State. Unless the facilities offered by the

and the results attained were more satisfactory, we do not expect the patronage of ambitious young men and women.

Our BUSINESS COURSE, including Bookkeeping, Accounting, Banking, Arithmetic, Spelling, Penmanship, Commercial Law, Business Correspondence, Office Practice, and Business Economics and Civics, offers the young man or woman a training of such a HIGH GRADE as to fit him or her for the BEST bookkeeping or other clerical positions.

Our STENOGRAPHIC COURSE, consisting of Chartier Shorthand, Spelling, Penmanship, Business Correspondence, Touch Typewriting, Office Work on the latest office devices, including Adding Machine, Writerpress, Mimeograph, Letter Press, Carbon Copying and Vertical Filing, fits any young person to perform duties that fit them for the HIGHEST POSITIONS offered by the Shorthand world.

The excellent work which our students are able to perform after completing the above courses has caused business men everywhere throughout this part of the country to seek our graduates in preference to others. Hence it is no uncommon thing to have our graduates spoken for months in advance of their finishing the course.

This demand is increasing year by year so that today we are able to Place Every Graduate or Refund Tuition

Nothing can be fairer. Don't you think that in justice to yourself you should investigate our school, decide on the results it is able to show and the high standards it upholds, if you would secure a preparation that will QUALIFY you for the BEST POSITIONS. Don't hesitate.

START NOW. Our work is conducted almost entirely on the INDIVIDUAL plan so that a student may begin any day and advance as rapidly as his ability will allow. Resolve to be somebody and back up your resolve by action NOW. Drop us a card for our new catalog. Or better call to see us and note for yourself the excellent modern equipment which we possess and the interested crowd of young men and women we have enrolled. Address personally

Chiropractic Will Remove The Cause Of Your Disease
And You Will Get Well

This modern science does not treat symptoms. Symptoms are only the effects of ailment, not the ailment itself. If you would be rid of pain and suffering you must have the cause removed.

If you are sick, come to the Chiropractor and have the cause of your sickness removed.

Disease is caused by pressure on nerves as they emerge from the spinal column. When there is a subluxation of a vertebrae (when it is out of place) it causes a pressure on nerves and the nerve supply to that part of the body to which they go is lessened, the tissue weakens and disease follows.

The Chiropractor removes this pressure by putting the bones of the spine into their proper places. Nature builds up the weakened and diseased parts and health follows.

Thousands of people are being made well by Chiropractic.

Why not YOU?

Lower in price and higher in quality.

The lightest weight 4-cylinder car in the world, size, power and capacity considered—60 pounds for every horse power. If heavy weight is valuable in a motor car, why do not the makers of the heavy cars advertise the fact? There is a reason.

FORD MODEL T, DELIVERY CAR, Capacity 750 pounds merchandise.
Completely Equipped $700.

FORD MODEL T. Torpedo, Two Passengers, Completely equipped $590.

We believe FORD Model T is fully ten per cent better in quality than ever before. Not because there have been any changes in design, but simply because of added refinements and conveniences.

It is the same car that has given such splendid satisfaction to more than 80,000 owners. The same car that is so familiarly known from "Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand." The car of immediate adaptability to the wants of all men.
Just as reliable, serviceable and enjoyable on the farm as it is on the paved streets of the city. Surely you see them wherever

Keep these facts in mind: Extreme simplicity in design. Vanadium steel (scientifically heat treated) construction. Magneto

Christmas Edition

The Quest of the Christmas Spirit

THE Cynic said there was no Christmas Spirit; that it had long since dragged its moth-eaten wings into the realm of forgotten myths. In its place, said the Cynic, was the Spirit of Custom, the Spirit of Commercialism, the Spirit of Barter.

To prove it, he set out to search the fabled haunts of the Christmas Spirit, for a glimmer of its raiment or a flutter of its wings. He entered first a home of the Very Rich, where the holly wreaths in every window, suspended by a superior quality of satin ribbon, seemed to say: "Within is the Christmas Spirit. At this joyous season are we privileged to share of our abundance with those less fortunate. Therefore we rejoice."

Now, within the home of the Very Rich the Cynic found a table laden with gifts about to be sent off by the butler. There was a costly vase for the Titled Cousin; a rare edition for the Richest Relative; a choice antique for the Valuable Business Ally; an order for twenty-five Christmas dinner baskets, to be delivered by the chauffeur; and a Christmas check, of thousands, for the Endowed Hospital for Working Girls, with which to meet the increased expenses after the holiday rush that always filled the Hospital with the Working Girls employed by the head of this very house of the Very Rich, and by the Business Ally.

The Cynic smiled, with ironic satisfaction. Verily, the Christmas Spirit dwelt not there. So into the seething shops, on Christmas Eve, the Cynic crowded, though fearful that here, where all the world was gift-buying, he must surely come upon the forsaken Spirit.

He beheld jostling, fretful, wild-eyed crowds, stampeding counters of mussy trinkets, behind which foot-sore, dull-eyed, harassed clerks prayed they would be dead before another "Merry Christmas."

And the Cynic laughed and laughed, until the spectacles fell off his long, lean nose.

It happened, as he was leaving the shop, that he saw a woman with a shawl over her head, crying softly in a corner. He heard her say that she had lost the dollar with which she meant to buy a doll for Mary and a drum for Peter. Presently he saw another woman, shawl-headed, too, go up to her and crush into her trembling hand a dollar bill. "Sure, an' I just picked it up,—it's that same dollar you were after losin'! Bless you, don't be thankin' me for only pickin' of it up!"

The Cynic knew that it was not the lost dollar bill that the woman had placed in the other's hand, because he had seen her take it from her own lank, worn purse. And, seeming to hear the soft rustle of wings, the Cynic followed her out into the street and to the very door of her tiny cottage.

Through the window he saw a strange group gathered about a scrawny Christmas tree, sparsely decorated. There was, besides the three children of the belated hostess, the one-legged man who peddled papers in the building where she scrubbed; the lone widdy woman next door, and the child whose mother had been arrested the day before for shop-lifting,—forlorn waifs gathered up in a warm embrace of friendliness.

And lo! when the woman he had followed entered the room there entered with her, luminous, the forgotten Christmas Spirit! And he saw that after all it was only the Spirit of Kindness with a holly wreath around its neck.

Now, nobody knows why, but a tear fell off the long, lean nose of the crabbed old Cynic who stood outside the cottage there, in the cold.

Copyright 1911 by J. J. Robinson.

It is a pity that the jolly custom of welcoming the Christmas tree into the house with great ceremony and merry-making has fallen into disuse.

Our great-grandfathers, we are told, set out several days before Christmas behind Old Dobbin, who kicked up his heels, frivolously, flinging back soft feathers of snow onto the sleigh full of noisy youngsters, to lead down a sturdy evergreen that was hauled home and into the huge kitchen in great state. Now, alas, we have no Old Dobbin, nor troops of youngsters, nor forests of evergreens around the corner. So the grocery boy smuggles our first Christmas tree into the basement, and on Christmas eve Father and Mother work till midnight trimming it, while wistful Willie and longing Lucy peer over the balustrade until sent back to bed.

Even if you prefer that the children first behold the tree only in all its glittering, bedecked glory, let them help a little in decorating the house, and even in fashioning little trinkets that will help out in trimming up the tree. Kindergarten beads that may be bought for five and ten cents a box, in all the bright colors, when strung on fine wire, are an effective decoration that little fingers may make. All manner of tiny lanterns may be cut out from gilt colored paper, and nuts may be gilded and tied with gilt cord so that they can be suspended from the tree.

When one does not feel like spending a great deal on the expensive, tinzel bangles with which to trim a tree, there are numerous little home-made articles that will answer every purpose.

Dolls made of tissue paper and dolls made from cotton batting will delight the little tots. The latter are tied into shape with red wool, and have quaint little faces linked on. Snowy popcorn fastened to the ends of the tree twigs with a pin through each kernel, makes the tree look as though it were bursting into little blossoms.

In decorating the house with wreaths and holly and other Christmas greens, you will find that massing the trim will produce better effects than scattering sprays and bunches about aimlessly. Remove all the small ornaments from the mantle shelf, for instance, and fill two big vases or jars with twigs of holly. If there is a picture above the mantle, carry a rope of laurel about the frame, and if it is an oval frame, or mirror, perhaps, cross the laurel at the top and let the ends fall to the corners of the mantle.

Day windows adapt themselves beautifully to graceful decoration. One attractive manner is to hang a wreath in the center of each window, and outline the side draperies with laurel which should extend across the top of the windows also. Strands of laurel used to drape back portiers or curtains add a gala touch. Wreaths hung at regular intervals from the balustrade of the stairway by wide red ribbons will brighten the hall wonderfully. A simple treatment for the dining room is to lay a rope of laurel about the plate rail, carrying it up over the doors and windows. Wreaths of laurel hung on the walls in each space left by the doors and windows will add greatly to the effect.

The Christmas dinner table affords unlimited opportunity for carrying out clever ideas, that range from the simple pyramid of polished fruit rising from a wreath of greens, to the representation of jolly old Kris Kringle alighting on a snow covered roof with his reindeer and pack of toys.

A doll dressed up like a tiny Santa Claus with prodigious cotton whiskers and ample cotton girth beneath a scarlet coat makes an amusing centerpiece when seated on a little sleigh almost buried in cotton snow, generously sprinkled with diamond dust. At each place a cardboard sleigh filled with green and red candles would be pretty, and the red candles might have shades cut from red cardboard in the shape of bells.

A great deal can be done with crepe paper, which comes printed with an all-over design in holly, with St. Nicholas flying over the snow in his sleigh, with big wreaths of holly, or sprays of poinsettia, with red and gold Christmas bells, and in many other appropriate designs.

A very successful table that had the holly-wreath paper draped with an edge so that the table seemed to be encircled with hanging wreaths, had for a centerpiece a great bunch of white carnations with a holly wreath around the bottom of the vase. At each place the plate rested on a dolly that had been made by cutting out the wreaths from the paper. Crepe paper was also used for the candle shades. It was first mounted on heavy paper, lined with red tissue paper, and strips about five inches wide laid in place enough to form a full shade. Red ribbon was run through the top to hold these plaques in place.

with tinfoil and a perfect shower of silver stars fell from it, held by fine wires. The star motive was easily carried out in the almond cups, the candle shades, the shape of the bread and butter, the salad with its stars of red boots, and the candles and nuts served on plates with star shaped dollies.

If the children are to have a little table to themselves on Christmas day, or if they are given a holiday party, they are sure to be delighted with the following decoration. Build a good-sized mound of cotton in the center of the table to simulate a rugged hill, sprinkling it plentifully with mica. Bits of twigs from the Christmas tree will serve for tiny trees. Dress small dolls in plain little scarlet coats, set scarlet caps—formed of two triangular pieces attached together—rabbles on their heads, and fasten them in grotesque positions onto little sleds, upon which they appear to be coasting down hill. The candles should be inclosed in black matboard, and the shades, with a little trouble may be made from the matboard and red tissue paper, so that they look like old-fashioned lamp posts.

A simpler idea in the case of little red stockings for decoration. These may be fastened about the edge of the table and hung from a hoop wound with laurel suspended over the table. Little doll's stockings at one place might contain odd gifts for each child.

Another idea in the case of little red stockings for decoration. These may be fastened about the edge of the table and hung from a hoop wound with laurel suspended over the table. Little doll's stockings at one place might contain odd gifts for each child.

A jolly way to distribute the presents is to have some one fish them out of a huge stocking that has been made from red cambric and trimmed with holly, and into which all the gifts have been put as they were sent to the house, or as they were finished by members of the family. A big box covered with crepe paper and made festive with wreaths or holly will answer the same purpose.

A clever woman surprised the family on Christmas morning by throwing open the library door, and disclosing any number of little gifts that appeared to be hanging by slender threads from the ceiling. A glance upward showed the same number of red and green toy balloons, clinging snugly to the ceiling and holding aloft the little packages.

Gifts You Can Make from Postcards

Copyright 1911 by J. J. Robinson.

Picture postcards have been like a delightful vice that "won't let go." We were inclined to regard the first crude output of them as make-shifts for the lazy and picture cards for the children. Little by little they got in their stride—they were such blessed time-savers, they were such inexpensive souvenirs for the folks at home, they were such suggestive mementos of travel! And now we have found that there is no end to their uses, and we buy them by the cartload.

Here are just a few ways in which you may utilize them for attractive, inexpensive Christmas gifts, that require very little time to make.

First, if you have a friend who is an invalid, or if you wish to remember some elderly person who does not get out often, be sure nothing will delight them more than a judiciously chosen pack of postcards, all stamped, and tied up with bright ribbons. Select a few cards, with birthday and New Year greetings on, several with messages of friendship and the rest bearing scenes of the home town. These will be a boon to anyone who is confined to the house, and besides to bother others about small matters. A dozen blotters, with a scenic card and a little calendar pasted on each one makes also an interesting gift. Or one may prepare a calendar for the year by pasting to the backs of twelve postcards the monthly calendar, and sending one on the first of each month, to the shut-in.

Indeed, there is no end to the variety of calendars one may fashion with the aid of cards—calendars for the person with a hobby, be it cats, dogs, bathing, hunting, babies, or the out-of-doors—calendars of almond-eyed Jap girls, court-plastered Gainsborough beauties, Watteau shepherdesses, and athletic maids—and calendars of cheer-up philosophy served in a carte.

The girl with neat and nimble fingers may make pretty postcard candle shades, having four, five, even six sides, with any of these beauties set into the alternate panels. Water color paper, passepartout in colors and in gilt, and thin hotted starch or library glue are all the materials required. A glance at the postcard rack will suggest many combinations. For a man's room there are the bright colored hunting scenes, with which black or red passepartout should be used. A little shade for the electric light in the nursery, of the cunning little Dutch figures, mounted on white paper with blue to bind it, would be pretty.

Charming passepartout pictures may also be made, by mounting a row of cards onto colored cardboard in some suitable shade—the hunting scenes on scarlet, for instance, the athletic girls on the college color, the Japanese cards on a wisteria-like shade, and the black and white thimble-borough ladies on dull grey.

This is The Spinal Column Split in Two, Showing Normal and Abnormal Nerves

Arrow No. 1, on the left side, points to a normal nerve. Notice how large it is. This nerve can transmit all the mental current from the Brain to the organs it leads to, that is necessary to keep those organs in perfect health.

The second arrow, No. 2, on left side, points to the spinal cord from which the small nerves (spinal nerves) branch.

Notice the arrow No. 3 at lower left side, pointing to the great sciatic nerve which is a full and perfect nerve leading down the leg. With a nerve like this you could not have sciatic rheumatism.

See arrow No. 4 on lower right side, points to the sciatic nerve. This nerve is pinched by subluxated vertebrae. Notice how small and shriveled it is. In this case you would be subjected to any disease such as sciatic rheumatism, acute or chronic, cramps, coxalgia, hip joint disease, housemaid's knee, stiffness of the leg, swelling of the foot, varicose veins (or milk legs) and consumption of the bone.

Notice the next three arrows, Nos. 5, 6 and 7, from the bottom upward on the right pointing to the 2nd, 3rd and lumbar nerve, all wasted away. Here is where appendicitis, lumbago, abdominal pains, hemorrhage of the bowels, piles, peritonitis, constipation, consumption of the bowels, and cramps of the bowels, etc., will be found.

Notice the arrow, No. 11, on the upper right, side pointing to the cervical nerve passing out between atlas and axis (or two upper cervical), also the next nerve below. They are both pinched and shriveled so that they can not get the normal amount of mental impulses through them, which is life, and if your neck is in this condition you will have any disease pertaining to this part of the body, such as catarrh, deafness, paralysis of face, dizziness, epistaxis, brain fever, apoplexy, catarrh, dizziness, epistaxis (nose bleed), insanity, torticollis or wry neck, rheumatism of the neck, etc.

Notice the second and third arrows, Nos. 9 and 10, from the top down on the right pointing to the nerves, lungs, heart and stomach. In case you will be subject to any disease pertaining to this part of the body, such as leakage of the valves of the heart, myocarditis, rheumatism of the heart, consumption, pleurisy, rheumatism of the ribs, stomach trouble, anorexia (loss of appetite), abnormal appetite, bad taste, belching of gas from the stomach, cancer of the stomach, abscesses of stomach, indigestion, acute or chronic, ulcers, gastritis, heart burn, hemorrhage of the stomach and "ick headache."

See fourth arrow from the top on the right, pointing to the kidney nerve which is pinched and is the cause of kidney trouble such as Bright's disease, Addison's disease, renal or kidney gravel, diabetes insipidus, diabetes mellitus, floating kidney, dropsy, dryness of the skin, blackheads, boils, pimples, granular eyelids, hemorrhage of the kidneys, rash and nephritis (inflammation of the kidneys).

CHIROPRACTIC

This Wonderful Science is Being Accepted Daily by People in All Walks of Life as the One Means of Enabling You to Get Well

Today Chiropractic is being accepted by people in all walks of life. In our office every day farmers, railroad men, merchants, agents, professional men and their wives and Children take Chiropractic adjustments.

Nerve force is the vital necessity to life. Chiropractic acts on the principle of relieving pinched and tortured nerves caused by spinal subluxations. Notice the nerves on the left side of the spine, as they branch from the spinal cord (arrow No. 2,) left side of cut, through the openings between the vertebrae (spinal bones.) The nerves are free from pressure. They are normal in size. The organs these nerves supply are normal in shape, function, size, etc., because they are getting the 100% of Life Current required to be free from disease. Arrow No. 3, on the left, points to the great Sciatic nerve. The nerve is normal in every respect, it carries all the life current intended and you are free from Sciatic Rheumatism, or any disorder that would be the result of obstruction or vertebral pressure on this nerve. The last arrow on the right points to a diseased condition of the Sciatic nerve. Compare the two. Would the Sciatic nerve on the right carry as much Nerve Force or Life Current as the one on the left? Not until Chiropractic adjustments have been given and the nerve released from the pinch between the vertebrae. Then and not until then will any condition deviating from the normal be removed.

We Successfully Remove the Cause of Disease in Any Form.

Arrows No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, (right side) point to atrophied nerves, which are the result of the spinal bones pressing on them.

The Intervention of Santa Claus

Copyright 1911 by J. J. Robinson.

By one of the crimson emeralds slipped along the waxed black thread upon which old man Harper's knobby fingers were stringing them. Presently he held up proudly the end of the polished strand of berries, that curled in bright circles about his chair, in its song harbor there behind the kitchen stove.

"I reckon they're pretty nigh enough to make a right smart showin' on the little scalawag's tree—what say, Lettita?"

"Well, Pa, I declare I b'lieve you're 'gittin' lazy," snapped the thin, brisk woman who was standing before the blurry interior above the sink, though according to look into as she tied a brown fascinator beneath her chin, in an emphatic Gordian-knot. "You just go ahead and string every last cranberry in that there dish-pan. I'm goin' to run over to Mrs. Wallace's for her spice cake receipt. If Tommy comes to tell him he's got to shovel the front walk in a before dark. They're quite a flurry outside. An' see if you can remember to throw on a handful of coal after awhile, Pa. You're that forgetful you're 'fible to set here an' let the fire go plumb out."

"I'll try not to forget, Lettita. An'—an' you know I'd just as lief as not string the berries for—"

The gust of wind from the quickly opened and closed door quite extinguished the quavering voice of the old man.

Patiently he continued to pierce the cranberries with the great darling needle, first holding it close to the frosty window to re-throw it by the waning light. It might have been a rosary, that scarlet strand—each berry a Christmas time of the years that had passed. O, those other Christmas times when the old house had been filled with the toddling little ones and the merry young ones and their smiling elders! Every year had thinned the Christmas-homing numbers. Fred's folks had gone out west; Clara and her family were in Florida; poor George was dead and the children and their mother too poor to make the annual trip; Andrew, who knew what had become of Andrew, a runaway at eighteen, a no-where-well always, a convict, they had heard, at twenty.

There would be only the three of them to sit down this year to Lettita's perfect turkey, crisply brown and bursting, as though by the prodigious bulge of its stuffing to equal the great girth of the birds of former days. Had it not been for Tommy, one of George's boys, whom Lettita, as a matter of stern duty, was raising, for the first time in a quarter of a century there would have been no Christmas tree in the plant-dotted bay-window in the parlor. But it should never be said that a child of George's had not received all the benefits of a Christmas home, from the catechism to Christmas trees. So there it stood in state with its battered trinkets and its tarnished tinsel bangles, lacking only the gay festoons of berries that the old man was fashioning in the deepening dusk of the quiet kitchen.

As he held up his needle again to the light, eyes squinted nearly shut, it seemed to him suddenly that a face was peering into the room through a square of the kitchen window. But the room had been so peopled with the memories that had crowded upon him, he thought it must be one of the dream faces that he had conjured up.

In a moment he heard the crunch of footsteps on the snow in the yard. Lettita back so soon! And he had forgotten to put the coal on the fire—the band with which he reached for the shovel on the nail, fell back again to grasp the arm of his chair, in trembling excitement. For the kitchen door had opened and closed and there before him, haggard and thinly clad stood a man whom he knew at once, by the ding of his head and the flash of his eyes, to be Lettita's boy, Andrew.

"You don't need to get excited," he said softly. "I know I ain't welcome round here, an' I ain't goin' to stay long. Thought I'd just take a look at the old place, as I was passin' through. I see they ain't been many improvements."

His dark eyes roved quickly about the room, rested for a moment on the old rocker near the window, whose arms bore the whitened scars of his first jack knife—on the wood box where he had liked to hide, on the red table cloth—the white bird cage—

"Andrew," the thin old voice was tremulous, "Andrew, I'm mighty glad to set eye on you again, Sonny."

"Grand-dad!" It was the intimate name of the days when the old man and the little boy had been chummy old cronies. "But of course—you don't know—about me," the man finished sharply.

"I know you ben out in the world battlin' with temptations, Sonny. You knocked some of 'em down, an' then again a few of 'em, they got their in-ahn's too. But you ain't the kind of feller to let 'em keep you under,—not if you're anythin' like the lucky little rascal I water dandle on my knee. It's powerful lonesome to home, nowdays. I wish you'd come back, Sonny, an' stay with your Ma an' me—"

"My mother! She told me I needn't never darken her doors again. She'd turn me out without a word. She ain't never had no love for me, you know that. Come back!"

"Just as I expected, Pa!" The fascinator was scarcely hung up behind the door before Lettita Dale was flitting up the coal stove. "Not a piece of coal ben put on this fire—low's it can be. It seems like you can't depend on nobody, anymore."

"Well, it ain't out, anyhow, Lettita. I'm sorry 'bout forgettin'. But I guess I got to thinkin' 'bout the old days. Old days when Fred was home an' Clara, an' the kids an' And—"

"You ain't better a ten tendin' to the fire than dreamin' and wool-gatherin', Pa." With an energetic clatter that was a rebuke to such shiftness she set to peeling the potatoes for supper.

"Got to thinkin'," went on the old man, undaunted, "bout how quiet an' lonesome-like it seems this Christmas. Got to wishin' some of the folks could come home. An' I got to wonderin'—"

Lettita, where Andrew was, anyhow. I wish the boy would come back home again, don't you, Lettita?"

The woman stiffened, never pausing in her skillful peeling of the potatoes.

"Pa, I've told you that Andrew Dale ain't no longer a son of mine. He brought disgrace on the name an' sorrow to his father an' mother. I don't never want to see him again."

"But a'pose the boy wanted to brace up—to—"

"Let him do it then. Time enough to talk when he does. It ain't in him. I don't know what I ever done to deserve such an affliction. But it's the Lord's will an' I guess I can bear up under it."

"But if maybe, we could sort o' help him, you know, Lettita,—chick him up an' all that," the old man pleaded.

"I wish you'd blow the horn out the front door for Tommy, Pa. He won't no more'n get his chores done before supper, as it is."

Several times during the long Christmas Eve the old man attempted to talk to his daughter about her son, only to be met with stony silence. Finally she burst out impatiently. "For the land's sake, what's got into you, Pa? I won't hear another word about Andrew. He's like he was dead to me, I tell you. Tommy, you ought to be to bed a half hour ago, if 'tis Christmas Eve. Your Grandfather'll be the ruler of you. Run along, now. Good night. Good night, Pa. He sure to have that extra quilt over you."

After he had paid his nightly visit to Tommy's little bed, telling him, over again, the old story of Dancer and Prancer and Vixen that he had told to so many wide-eyed grand-children, the old man waited in his bedroom until he heard Lettita breathing, deep and regular. Then in his stocking feet he mounted the back stairs, very softly.

Andrew had emerged from behind a pile of trunks and boxes where he had piled up some old quilts and clothes that formed a bed infinitely superior to the ones to which he was accustomed.

"I'm goin' down to the kitchen an' bring you up a bit to eat, Sonny. Just make yourself to home—"

"I have you said anything to Mother—how does she—what does she—"

"I done my best, son. These women folks is pretty stubborn, sometimes, you know. But I'll fetch her yet—I'll fetch her. You take it easy, now. I'll have some vittles up here quick as I can."

"You're a good old scout, Grand-dad. But I'll be goin' on, bright an' early in the mornin'." It ain't any use."

Old man Harper scarcely slept at all that strange Christmas Eve, and clear, cold Christmas morning. He prayed earnestly that the way be shown him to soften the heart of the mother so that her son might not go away, unforgiven, on Christmas Day. He wondered if it would have been better for them to meet at once. Perhaps if she had been taken unaware—Now that she was, in a way prepared, she would no doubt be able to steel herself to every appeal. Plan after plan he pondered and rejected.

Early in the morning, before Tommy was stirring, he slipped up to the attic again, determined to get Andrew's promise that he would not slip away that day. It was obtained with less trouble than he had expected because the man was worn out and ill from the exposure of the night before.

"I'll lay here and get set up a bit, Grand-dad. But no more 'bout seein' Mother. I tell you it ain't any use."

"Now, Sonny, I ain't a givin' up that easy. Providence 'll intervene—sure's you're a foot high!"

Up to four o'clock that afternoon, however, Providence had given no evidence of concerning herself in the affairs of the divided family under the old roof-tree.

Lettita Dale sat in the parlor reading "Paths to Glory," the gift of the minister, as befitting the Christmas day. In the kitchen Tommy was playing with a building game on the floor near old man Harper's chair.

"Aw, gee, I'm sick of this old game!" announced Tommy. "Wish they was some'n' better to do. Wish I had a Injun suit like Herbie's. Wish I could dress up like a pirate or some'n'—"

"Hush, Grandfather,—I seen a old Santa Claus suit hangin' up in the attic yesterday! Aunt Let, said somebody made believe like he was Santa Claus once. Guess I'll dress up an' go over to Herbie's! Injun suits ain't so much, huh?"

Then it was that Providence tapped the old man on the forehead.

"Tommy, come here. That's a fine idee of yours. Now, I tell you what you do. You dress all up—put on the beard an' everythin', an' pretend you're Santa Claus, sure enough. 'Tight near where that red coat is hangin' you'll see a old valise. In it they's a box that'd make the best Christmas present for your Aunt Let that she ever got. You take that box, an' before you go over to Herbie's you just run into the parlor, pretendin' like you're really Santa Claus, all the time, an' tell her you got a Christmas present for her. Then run out quick,—an' my! she'll be that 'sprised an' wonderin'!"

Tommy needed no urging. The role of Santa Claus appealed to him very strongly. In a moment his grandfather heard him moving about as quietly as possible in the attic, so that his aunt's sharp ears might not hear him.

He was quite sure that the child would not discover Andrew, hidden as he was behind the pile of trunks, and he was certain Andrew would not disclose himself.

It was a strange chance that had led him to open the old valise that morning. He had thought that if Andrew were determined upon going away at once, he would smuggle a coat and some underwear and what food he could, up to the attic for him to take away with him. When he opened the old valise, which he remembered had once been Andrew's, to see if it were empty so that he might put the things into it, it need be, he saw within it a crustily fashioned wooden box, with rusty hinges and broken clasp, upon the top of which was ornately, if irregularly, carved "Mother, Dec. 25, 1872."

a lock of soft gold hair, tied with a blue ribbon; a little woolen mitten; a slung shot, some marbles and a couple of slate pencils, besides several trinkets.

The box he recognized as one which he had helped Andrew to make for his mother years ago, when his little fingers were awkward, but aspiring. For years, no doubt, it had lain there, forgotten receptacles of the babyhood memories of a wayward boy. He had thought of taking the box to Lettita then, but he knew that she would fight against the memories that it held, too proud to let him see if there was a vulnerable spot in her grim armor of determination.

In a few moments Tommy bounded into the kitchen, long red coat trailing wildo beard askew, in his chin, and a pointed red cap pulled down to his ears.

"Ain't it a peach, Grand—ther? Ain't it the real thing? Say, what's in this old box, anyhow? I don't b'lieve Aunt Let 'll give a cent for that."

"Never mind, Tommy. You just give it to her—don't say nothin'—an' then see! Mind now!—An' the Lord go with you!" murmured the old man fervently.

He heard the boy open the parlor door. Then he heard the front door slam, and saw the grotesque little red figure dash across the snowy yard.

For perhaps twenty minutes he waited. Then ever so softly, ever so carefully, he slipped into the hall, and looked into the mirror of the hall tree that was opposite the parlor door. He could see Lettita sitting in a rocker in the front window. "Paths to Glory" had fallen to the floor. Upon her lap the wooden box with the rusty hinges lay open. The tears were coursing down her quivering cheeks; as she pressed to her lips a little red shoe, with the toe kicked out, and a tiny, woolen mitten.

"My boy—my boy! My little boy! Where are you now? O, where are you now?" he heard her murmur.

As quickly as his old legs would carry him he hurried into the kitchen and up the attic stairs.

"Come, Sonny! Come! Providence has intervened! Come with me!"

Andrew followed him, tottering, wondering.

The old man pushed him gently through the open parlor door, and started back again for his chair behind the stove in the kitchen.

There was a sound like the falling of a wooden box to the floor, and the scattering of marbles; the voice of Lettita—"My boy—Andrew"—a low, loved by Andrew's dazed, happy, "Mother!"

"I thought it was Providence," remarked old man Harper to Tommy, who bolted in the kitchen a few minutes later, but I guess 'twas you that done it, Mr. Santa Claus, after all,—you little scalawag!"

"Pa," called Mrs. Dale from the parlor, "put on the tea kettle right away. This boy's got to have a good hot lemonade and go right straight to bed this minute. I never seen nothing like the careless way he's dressed. It's the greatest wonder in the world he ain't down that with pneumonia!"

Copyright 1911 by I. J. Robinson.

If you will set the children to making simple little gifts while you are fashioning duds, trilly do-dads, all lace and ribbons, it will not only be the valuable means of keeping them busy, but it will infuse them with the spirit of giving, which we are pretty apt to monopolize these days, forgetting that in our own generosity we are likely to make the children greedy little gift-takers, robbed of the very essence of the Christmas spirit.

Small son will think, first of all of daddy, perhaps, to whom he should like to present some small gift, as many a man, by winding a stick about twelve inches long—the handle of a small broom would answer nicely—with red ribbon about three-quarters of an inch wide, which is securely tacked at each end, and finishing it at each end with bows and a loop to suspend it by, he can make a necktie rack that will be a real convenience.

If he is old enough to whittle, even crudely, with a little help he could make a doll's cradle for sister, from a couple of cigar boxes, one with the cover removed, serving as the cradle, the other being used for the rockers, to which the box is glued.

A clipping case is easily made with six Manila envelopes. Through the bottom corners of the envelopes holes must be punched large enough to pass a ribbon through, which is tied in a little bow on the upper side. Suspension rings should be attached to the outer envelopes at the top near the edge, and ribbon run through these to hold the envelopes in the place.

Book marks may be made in infinite variety, with the help of postcards bearing some sort of animal head. Water color paper, or thin cardboard should be cut in strips four inches long, rounding into a half circle at the top about an inch and a half in diameter (smaller, of course, if the heads to be used are small, because the head must cover all of this portion) and tapering down to rounded corners at the bottom.

The animal's head cut from the postcard is pasted over the top, and a triangular slit cut just below it, point down, so that it will slip over the page of a book easily.

A dozen blotters with a calendar for each month pasted in the corner would be a very acceptable necessary for the desk. An eye-glass holder of cardboard pieces about the size of a tumbler-bottom, plunked about the edges with sharp scissors, and fastened through the center with a bow of holly ribbon could be made by the smallest fingers.

Sister will love to make a dainty anchor or fringed ribbon, and bit of Dresden ribbons may be whipped together about the edges by her tiny, awkward fingers that will delight some fond aunt, even if the anchor all leaks out.

Many handy little articles may be made after a paper pattern of a Christmas bell—blotter, the top one of leatherette, tied at the top with bright ribbon—match scratchers of sand paper, that may be tied with ribbon or lined about the edges with raffia, leaving a loop at the top to hang the bell up by and needle hooks with flannel leaves and silk covers. An older child may make a telephone pad by covering a heavy piece of cardboard with canvas or erotome, allowing enough around the edges so that the material may be turned over for half an inch and glued down. The back should then be covered with wrapping paper, neatly pasted on, a pencil attached to the corner by a ribbon, and a ruled sheet or card pasted in the center of the board for the numbers.

Dressing Up the Christmas Packages

Copyright 1911 by I. J. Robinson.

IF you ever received a gift that was wrapped up in wrinkled tissue paper, a bit soiled—or even, perhaps, a ragged piece of yellow wrapping paper—fastened with a pin, or tied once through the middle with a stringy smatch of ribbon and into a discouraged one-loop bow? Do you remember that throbbing vision of the giver, slumping the gift into the paper in a manner that suggested strongly her thoughts at the time? "There, thank goodness, that's done and out of the way. I simply couldn't get out of sending her something, but it's such a nuisance when I'm so busy with other more important things."

If you have ever received one of these packages that was simply wrapped up and not dressed up, you know that the wrappings often proclaim the spirit of the giver far louder than the gift itself. It is not necessary to smother a package with ribbons and holly and fluttering cards, but immaculate neatness and tasteful color combinations are possible to the least purse.

Nothing has quite the Christmas look of a trim package done up carefully in white tissue paper and tied with red baby ribbon, with a little spray of holly tucked beneath the intersection of the ribbon. Some prefer to use white ribbon, with a carnation, or a bit of mistletoe and holly combined, to add the touch of color. The gummed strips such as are used for framing small pictures, in gold or scarlet, may be used with very attractive results on a boxed package, little Christmas stickers sealing it neatly where the strips cross. Gold cord is very pretty also, and rafia used for tying up certain arts and crafts articles is most appropriate. Green tissue paper in place of white may be used by way of variety.

Tissue paper napkins in a holly design may be used successfully for small gifts, or if you do not insist upon carrying out the holiday colors some of the pretty floral designs are very "faintly and artistic when tied with harmonizing ribbon." The gift may be placed in the center of the napkin, and the four corners drawn together while the ribbon is tied around like a draw string, and then pulled out like petals.

If one is sending a tiny gift like a bit of jewelry, a clever idea is to get a good sized doll's stocking, and tuck the little gift in the very tip of the scarlet toe, filling the rest of it with candies and laying it in a box on a bed of holly.

Often one wishes to send money as a gift, but does not wish it to appear as though the giving of it were the easiest way out of a difficulty. Saugle a crisp bill in the heart of an artificial rose, and the your Christmas card to the stem of it. Or get a little Japanese umbrella, tuck the bill beneath the slender ribs and print on the top of it: "Good for a Rainy Day." A little doll with a gingham dress and floppy sun-bonnet could wear with grace an apron consisting of a green-back, or be protected from wintry blasts by a crackling green shawl about her shoulders. One of the little animals found filled with candy in the candy shops would also be an amusing repository for a bill.

One woman solved the problem in a unique way by suspending bright new dimes by scarlet ribbons from the branches of a little potted plant. The effect, when the wrappings of scarlet tissue paper fell away from the twinkling plant was that of a gayly decked miniature Christmas tree.

If the gift hasn't far to travel it may be secreted in a scooped-out orange, the top of which is replaced, and held in place by encircling ribbons of green. Or imagine the surprise of opening a box in which, on a mica sprinkled bed of cotton rested a huge potato neatly tied around and around with holly ribbon! When the ribbon is removed the potato falls open in two parts that have been hollowed out as much as possible, and in the moist little compartment is disclosed a tiny bottomhole bouquet quite as fresh as when it was placed in the old potato.

HOW THEY SPEND CHRISTMAS ACROSS THE SEA

Copyright 1911 by I. J. Robinson.

ROBARKLY the Germans are the greatest lovers in the world of Christmas and its time-hallowed ceremonies. It is to them woven many of the legends from which are derived our most picturesque customs, a large share of the children's toys, from dolls to hobby horses and aeroplanes, and all the fragile, tinsel glass ornaments with which we decorate our Christmas trees. The little village of Lauscha, Germany, may well be called the workshop of Santa Claus, for there the peasants spend their lives in a toyland that they industriously create, the work being done in their own homes.

The light of the flickering candles that Martin Luther hung on the little fir tree, that he was the first to bring into the house at Christmas time and decorate in this way, has shed its twinkling glory through all the years since then. In Germany especially is the Christmas tree, now lavishly trimmed and brilliantly illumined with myriads of candles or many-colored electric lights, made the most important feature of the holiday festival. The setting up and decoration are matters of great mystery, taking place behind the closed doors of library or of sitting room, which becomes at once the "Christmas room." Sharply at

In the villages, an old man, bundled up to his ears in furs, bubbling over with the good spirits of Yuletide, and known as Knecht Ruprecht, goes about giving toys and sweets to the children from a huge bag he carries slung over his shoulder.

And what preparations go on in the kitchen, for a month before the holidays! There is no home, be it palace or cottage, that is without its Pfefferkuchen, small ginger spice cakes. Honey cakes are also made in great quantities, to satisfy the sweet tooth for which the Germans are well known. A special bread is made at Christmas time, which contains almonds, raisins and poppy seed, in the usual generous "Tontonic" proportions, and which is stewed in milk. Goose, usually taken the place of our turkey, on the Christmas dinner table, and carp, cooked in beer is considered a holiday dish.

In France the celebration extends over three days, during which time there are many special services in the churches, and many charitable projects carried out. In the south of France the peasants go through a pretty ceremony of blessing the Christmas log, that is much like the Yule-log celebration in England. The family dinner takes place in France usually on Christmas Eve, and the table is laden with such delectable dishes as pate de foie gras, boar's head jelly stuffed with pistachio, truffled turkey, or perhaps a Strasbourg pie, made of truffles and the livers of fattened geese. Frog legs, lobsters, oysters and snails served with the sauces the French know so well how to make, are holiday entrees.

The Russians cease work entirely, sometimes for as long a time as a month, in order properly to celebrate the holidays. The clergy call upon each and every member of their flock at this time, with the sanguine expectancy of being made the recipients of substantial gifts, which it may be said in passing, are not always given with that free spirit of generosity that we all know should accompany a Christmas gift, of all others.

On Christmas Eve the peasants take part in a picturesque celebration known as "Kolenda." In the starlit night they gather about the houses of the nobles, singing Christmas carols, and eating in their worn old caps the colts tossed down to them from the serenaders.

A great masquerade held during Christmas week is one of the most important celebrations. At this function the peasants dress to represent various animals in order to perpetuate in this way the memory of the lowliness of Christ's birth in the stable.

On Christmas day an impressive sight may be seen in Roumania. A great procession of priests, and Roumanians dressed to represent different Biblical characters, march slowly to the River Danube, singing chants the whole way. When they arrive at the glistening, frozen stream, it is blessed with great ceremony by the priests, the ice is broken and a small wooden cross thrown into the water. The cross is considered to bring great good fortune to whomsoever recovers it.

In the land of windmills and poppies there is also a procession of all the men of the village, but this occurs at midnight on Christmas Eve. The villagers, in quaint, varied costumes, assemble in the public square where one of their number is selected to bear a great illuminated star on a long pole. With the star to guide them through the often unlighted streets the procession winds through the village, the men chanting "Gloria in Excelsis." A veritable feast, prepared by the women, is served to them after their march.

In our own Philippines the Christmas celebration is distinctly religious in character. It is a pretty sight to see the children of the natives, carrying beautiful chains of flowers, parade through the streets preceded by a band, and singing Christmas songs, on their way to the various churches.

WAVES AND BILLOWS ON THE ATLANTIC

"As Well as Ever," Is Pastor Russell's Message.

On the Atlantic Returning From Most Successful Lecturing Trip Abroad—Says That Church's Present Experiences Are by Way of Preparation For Her Future Work.

Nov. 10.—"As well as ever, thank God," was Pastor Russell's message to the millions who read his sermons weekly in the secular press. His text was from Psalm xli, 1-8, especially the words "All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me." St. David spoke of his own experiences, his own tribulations; but prophetically he represented the Messiah—head and body—Jesus and his saints gathered during this age out of all nations, sects and parties—"the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."—Hebrews xii, 23.

The Prophet's experiences—waves and war of trouble, disappointments, etc.—he knew were not evidences of God's disfavor, but contrarywise proofs of the Heavenly Father's love and care—evidences that he was being taught of God, in preparation for a work which he was to do. He was pursued by Satan's devices and was like an antelope in the chase, famished for water. "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, oh God;" "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." When shall I come and appear before Thee, oh God? When will my trials, my testing be finished? When shall I be received into everlasting fellowship as the Son of the Highest?

The people in general could not understand how Divine favor could be with one so tempted, so tried, so beset by persecutors, so maligned; as he said, "Mine enemies speak evil of me; When shall he die and his name perish? If he come to me as a reporter, he speaketh falsely; his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad he telleth it." "All that hate me whisper together against me."—Psalm xli, 5-7.

Full of faith St. David would not be overwhelmed. His faith would outlive the storms. He would learn his lesson. He would thus demonstrate his faith, his loyalty to God.

The Greater David—Beloved. Pastor Russell declared the most important feature of St. David's career centered in the fact that he typified the Messiah—head and members. The name David signifies Beloved, and Messiah is the beloved Son of God. He is the Chief or Head over this house of sons; all of whom are God's dear children—Beloved. Thus the prophecies of the future in which David figures prominently are properly understood to refer to the great work of Messiah's Kingdom—the Throne of David will be the Throne of Messiah which will be established under the whole heavens.

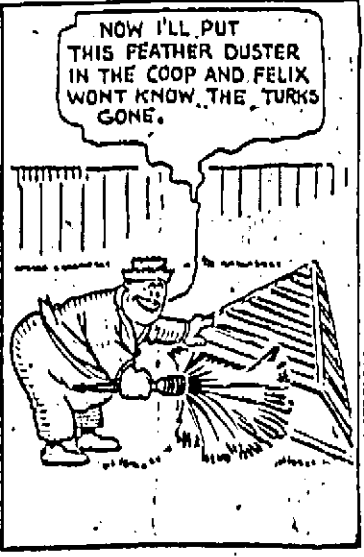

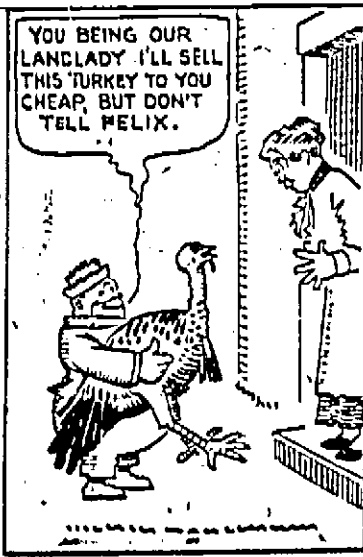

The waves and billows of trouble which passed over the Prophet David, typified the trials and difficulties of the narrow way in which Jesus and his faithful followers of the new creation must walk to attain the promised glory, honor and immortality. St. David's trials of faith and loyalty to God typified the faith and loyalty of Christ Jesus and the Church amid the trials that will come with the end of the present night time, ushering in the New Day, in which Christ will reign in righteousness for the overthrow of sin and death. They may rejoice in hope, knowing that all things are working together for good to them, because they love God supremely; (Romans viii, 28). "Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning."—Psalm xxx, 5.

Our Mission Now—and Then.

Sin, the fall, degradation and selfishness have had the effect of hardening the hearts of mankind. They are stone-hearted by reason of the prevalent selfishness; the tender-hearted, who love righteousness, are bruised—wounded—broken. This heart-breaking is not injurious.

The broken-hearted are the more ready to receive the message of God's love and mercy. It is of this broken-hearted class that the Lord is making up His elect Church. "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." So far from its being the mission of the Church to break men's hearts it is the very reverse—it is theirs "to bind up the broken-hearted."

Then will come the Church's future work for which all of her present experiences are preparations—she being overruled by Divine providence. Present experiences with trials and difficulties, battling with the waves of trouble and obtaining Divine assistance to surmount them, will all be valuable preparations of the Church for her future work of glory. Then she will be perfect with her Redeemer on His heavenly throne. How much her own present experiences will serve to make this class sympathetic and merciful prelates of God toward men "in the Ages to come" (Ephesians ii, 6, 7), none but God can foretell.

"BEST ON EARTH"
This is the verdict of H. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife. After case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure. Without opiates or harmful drugs of any kind Foley's Honey and Tar Compound stops coughs and cures colds. Do not accept any substitute. Badger Drug Co.

Helpful Hints For Gift Givers

There's a Christmasy feeling in the air. "Many and many a list is being surreptitiously made out,"—and big brains and little ones are being racked for an answer to those old problems—"What?" and "how much?" In your Christmas shopping you are apt to overlook the hardware store, associating it with nails and other heavy, unsightly ware. This store is literally full of beautiful and appropriate gifts for men, women and children. A glance at our window display will quickly dispel any doubt on your part as to the appropriateness of our gifts. You will have pleasure in seeing these gifts and many others now in our display of gift things—all of them moderately priced. For comfort and convenience on your part we suggest that you shop early in the month and early in the morning.

They save fuel, save money, save time, save work, save worry, save doctor's bills.

Save fuel: Because the fuel necessary to properly heat them is a small percentage of that required where a continuous heat is used as in the ordinary stove.

Save Money: Because it reduces fuel consumption tremendously—in many instances as high as 90 per cent—sufficient as a matter of fact to pay for the cost of a "Caloric" in a very short time.

Save Time: Because as soon as the food is placed in the "Caloric" the housewife or cook may devote herself to her other duties.

Save work, worry and trouble. Because while clearing up the breakfast dishes, the next meal may be prepared, placed in the "Caloric," where the cooking process will continue without further thought, time, worry or trouble on the part of the cook.

Save Doctor Bills: because the food is cooked hygienically—is more healthful—thereby preventing indigestion and doctor bills. "Caloric" Cookers range in price from $7.50 upwards. See them in window. Easy payments can be arranged.

A Very Suitable Gift, a "Meteor" Coffee Perculator

The "Meteor" is a perfect coffee maker. You are assured good, delicious coffee, every day if you have a "Meteor" in the house—no hit or miss about it. A very desirable model, solid copper, latest design mission style stands, highly desirable gift at $8.00.

Gifts Christina Made

Copyright 1911 by I. J. Robinson.

CHRISTINA appeared to be sitting in the middle of a rainbow that had been smashed to smithereens, with a fleecy white cloud at her elbow and one arm thrust through another of day-break pink, edged with marabou. A couple of glorified "rag-bags" spilled their motley contents on the floor there in the corner, the tables were littered with papers and cards and ribbons, and pert little twigs of holly poked up their red berries from every corner, one perching itself rakishly over Christina's left ear, the scarlet of the holly vying with the scarlet of Christina's cheeks.

Presently she flung over her head the cloud of day-break pink, with its marabou edge the brown of her eyes. "Couldn't you cut it?" cried Christina. "And it's the simplest thing to make,—just two yards of chiffon, shirred crosswise in clusters about nine inches apart along the whole length, and edged with marabou. I've made three of these scarfs for the girls. The others had two thicknesses of chiffon; one of them a pink and blue combination, the other an Oriental effect of plain coronation red and a rich Persian pattern of chiffon, which I thought would be stunning for Paula, with her black hair and eyes, you know. They are over there on the 'finished' table. Take a look!"

The "finished" table was piled high with all manner of dainty little gifts, each one eloquent of the clever thought and nimble fingers of Christina. Here were two of those fascinating breakfast caps, that are especially desirable when one is ill, one unlined, but run with wide satin ribbon fastened in a huge chou to be worn at the side, the other lined with pale blue china silk, and both made from dices of Irish lace, with the ribbon drawn in to form the crown so that a two inch frill was left about the edge. For a dear little handkerchief bag two small medallions of Irish lace (picked up on a bargain counter, Christina confided) were sewed together at the bottom and sides and had a white cotton draw string with tiny bells to finish the ends of it.

Of bags there was a bewildering variety, from a bean bag for Little Sister, of tan linen, with a big butterfly outlined in chain stitch with brown silk, to an evening bag crocheted with silver thread and lined with heliotrope silk. A party bag that appeared to be made from some rich, unusual material proved upon inspection to be simply a striking bit of cretonne covered with rose color chiffon that harmonized with the dominant tone of the cretonne. A collar bag of linen crash was drawn up with linen cord and had a splashing monogram worked in the center. And for the girl beyond the seas was a work bag, or more correctly a box, since its sides were stiffened with cardboard, which by the loosening of the cord that held these sides upright could be flattened out for mailing.

A safety pocket, made of tan linen and attached to a strong beltting to be worn around the waist, was intended for the woman who was planning a long trip. It had two pockets, one for jewelry and money, the other large enough for letters and papers, which were securely fastened with patent buttons.

Nothing could have been prettier than the bed room slippers Christina had made from Dresden ribbon, and from broadened silk. Onto the soft soles that may be bought in all sizes she had wrapped the edge of wide Dresden ribbon, for one pair, shirring it up into place so that a sort of cuff of the ribbon turned down around the top and finishing it with a big fluffy rosette of the ribbon. For a pair of soles she had used a handsome piece of broadened silk simply bound at the edge with ribbon feather stitched on.

Next to the delectable chiffon scarfs was a whiff of an evening hood in blue chiffon, shirred all over, the shirrings about an inch apart, and caught into shape at each side with tiny bunches of roses.

All a-flutter with saucy little bows was an apron of cross-hatched dainty consisting of three parts, or leaves cut like shamrock leaves and edged with narrow lace. Ribbon run through bonding was used for the belt and the bows of ribbon held the smaller leaves to the center one. Another dainty sewing apron of figured organdie was gathered slightly onto the lace banding at the waist through which was run wide satin ribbon and was filled in again at the bottom and finished with the banding. The ribbon at the bottom was long enough so that it could be brought around the skirt and tied in a bow in the back, in a quaint sort of hobble effect.

In a little box of Italian basketry, bearing a card marked "Grandmother Mine" was a fluffy jabot of black and white net, edged with tiny ruffles of point d'esprit. Two pieces of chambray were slipped between covers of white linen, embroidered in a tiny wreath pattern and tied at the top with a bow of white ribbon, forming a pretty and useful eye-glass holder. At the bottom of the box was a little grey gauze fan, upon which Christina had painted in water colors a border of violets in delicate shades.

For Miss Babykins was one plain little bonnet of smocked china silk in white with two pairs of ties, and another, more elaborate, was also made from china silk, embroidered in a dainty eyelet pattern, but had a half of pale blue. There were several pairs of extra-bonnet ties, simply hemstitched across the end, with a row of featherstitching and tiny French knots just above the hem. A couple of white pique bibs, with scalloped edges embroidered in white cotton had a small initial worked in the center.

Probably nothing would please Christina's little cousin of seven, who was just beginning to write, so much as the box of note paper that had been prepared for her. Christina had cut out from a magazine various little brown-like figures, and pasted one on each sheet of paper, giving them a holiday touch by painting their funny little skirts red and green.

With a flun wire and some small pearl beads Christina had succeeded in fashioning a splendid imitation of those exquisite little pearl butterflys that are so pretty worn with the machine neckbow. She had twisted the wired heads into bow-knot, fastened it at the center with a bit of thread, which was covered by a separate piece of wire strong with larger beads that she fastened about the joining. Dull black beads, with the sheen of black machine, formed a suitable accessory for the hat who was wearing black.

An attractive case for playing cards had a holly-wreathed card tucked into it that was inscribed "For My Friend, the Solitaire Friend." It was made from a strip of burlap a little wider than a deck of cards, and long enough to form a pocket at one end, and a flap to hold over at the other. It was lined with soft grey chambray and the edges bound with upholsterer's glimp in silver. Patent buttons in each corner of the flap fastened it neatly.

A necktie holder and pin cushion all in one had been cleverly constructed from an embroidery hoop. The hoop was first wound tightly with ribbon. A flat pin cushion of silk to match, the shape of a half circle, was fitted into the upper half of the hoop. Rosettes of the ribbon finished it, at each side and a long loop of ribbon, with ends under the rosettes, was attached so that it might be hung from a dresser or gas jet.

It was a thoughtful selection of delightful gifts, none of them expensive, but not one of them that would not carry with it, like a fragrance, Christina's affectionate regard, and evidence of her taste and ingenuity.

Copyright 1911 by J. J. Robinson.

ELICIOUS are a few of the odors of mince meat and pudding, instilling fragrance of cakes and candies—these are the guaranteed torch bearers, so to speak, of the Christmas feasting, that are already beginning to slip through swinging doors to whet our holiday appetites.

The wise housekeeper has found that the greater preparations she has been able to make in advance, the greater is the success and the less the worry and confusion of the Christmas meals; and she has also found that almost everything, even the turkey or duck, may be prepared at least the day before.

She should bear in mind, that whereas the heartiness of the Christmas dinner permits of the simplest possible breakfast and supper, still these meals should be carefully planned and served with some attention to the festive details that are often lavished only on the dinner. The breakfast table may have for its centerpiece simply a pyramid of brightly polished red apples, but a holly wreath laid about it or little twigs of the holly springing from it will give a gala touch.

Boiled eggs may be served in a nest of Christmas greens, or baked eggs in green peppers on a holly decked platter. After all the seeds are removed from the peppers they should be dusted with pepper and salt before the eggs are broken into them, and a piece of holly may be laid across the top before they are served. Hot rolls may also be served in a nest of greens, and the butter cut into star-shapes with a tiny cutter. Or if toast is preferred, it takes but a moment to fashion this into stars with a larger cutter, and place on a garnished plate.

The decorations for the dinner table may be left undisturbed for the light luncheon in the evening. A delightful way to utilize the remnants of turkey is to mix up a generous pan of baking powder biscuits and serve them in a way called "Biscuits en surprise." When they are done the top is pried off carefully and enough of the inside removed to form quite a little hollow. This is filled with the turkey that has been mixed with celery, a few capers and mayonnaise dressing, and the top of the biscuit is replaced. With coffee, cakes and nuts these will be found quite sufficient for supper, or they may be served for evening refreshments.

And now for the Christmas dinner, whose bursting fowl has been stalking for weeks through Sonny's dreams, and whose luscious pies and lighted puddings have filled his fancy.

THREE RELIABLE RECIPES FOR THE CHRISTMAS PUDDING.

English Plum Pudding. Stone one pound of raisins, and mix with one pound of dried currants and one-half pound of shredded candied orange peel, flouring all the fruit well in one-quarter pound of flour. Then add one-half pound of mixed nuts that have been chopped fine. Add one-half a grated nutmeg, three-quarters pound of stale bread crumbs and one pound of chopped suet. Beat five eggs, without separating, until light. Add one-half a pint of grape juice, and pour this mixture over the dry ingredients, and mix thoroughly, until the whole is moist but not wet. Pack in greased molds or small tins, cover carefully and boil or steam for ten hours. When done, remove the covers and allow the pudding to cool. When it is cold the covers may be replaced, and when wanted for use the pudding may be reheated by boiling or steaming for an hour. It will keep for months, improving, indeed, with age. It may be served with hard or liquid sauce, or both, if desired.

Vegetable Plum Pudding. (Scottish). Mix well together one pound of smoothly mashed potatoes, one-half pound carrots that have been boiled until tender and beaten to a paste, one pound of flour, one pound of currants, three-quarters pound brown sugar, one pound raisins (full weight, after stone), two ounces suet, one nutmeg, one-quarter teaspoonful salt, one egg (to bind). When mixed put into a well floured cloth, tie up closely and boil for six hours. Spice and sweetenings may be added if desired. This pudding is very good eaten cold, and is considered more digestible than many others.

A Simple Christmas Pudding. For this pudding is required one-quarter cup butter, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup milk, one egg, one and one-half cups Graham flour, one-half teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful of salt, one cup raisins (seeded and cut up in small pieces). Mix together the molasses, milk, egg, (well beaten) and melted butter. Add the dry ingredients, sifted together and the raisins. Turn into a buttered basin or mold and steam two and one-half hours. Any other fruit desired may be substituted for the raisins.

FOR THE COOKY JAR.

Peanut Jumbles. Take one and one-half cups butter, two cups sugar, six eggs, one and one-half cups flour, one-half cup cornstarch, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon extract of lemon, one-half cup of chopped peanuts, and mix with a half cup granulated sugar. Rub the butter and sugar smooth; add the beaten eggs, the flour, cornstarch and powder, sifted together, and the extract; flour the board, roll out the dough rather thin, cut out with a biscuit cutter, roll in the chopped peanuts and sugar, and lay on a greased baking tin. Bake in medium hot oven from eight to ten minutes.

Mock Macaroons. To make two dozen dainty little cakes, which are just the thing to serve with afternoon coffee, or with any cold or frozen dessert, beat the white of one egg until light (but not stiff), and add gradually, while beating continually, one cupful of brown sugar. Cut and fold in one cupful of pecan nuts finely chopped and sprinkled with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Drop from the tip of the spoon an inch apart on a buttered sheet and bake in a moderate oven until they are delicately brown.

Ginger Creams. For these appetizing cookies, which may be cut into holiday shapes with special cutters, and frosted with tinted icing, is required one-half cup butter, one-half cup lard, one cup soft brown sugar, one cup New Orleans molasses, one cup boiling water, one and one-half teaspoonsful ginger, and flour. Cream the butter and lard, add sugar and molasses, and the soda dissolved in boiling water. Sift two cups of flour and the spices together and add to the first mixture, adding more flour until the mixing spoon will stand upright in the dough. Mix at night and put in a cold place, then, in the morning roll out a half-inch thick, and after cutting bake in a moderate oven. Spread each cream with boiled frosting.

A FEW NOVELTIES—CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

Apples a la Mode. Remove the cores from large apples and fill up with mince meat, adding a little water and sugar. Bake slowly until the apples are tender. These should be served hot, and may have a tablespoonful of meringue, browned quickly in the oven, placed on the top and sprinkled lightly with chopped nuts.

Candy Apples. Fill with nuts with apples from which the cores have been removed. Dip in a syrup of sugar and water which has been boiled until it is crisp, fasten on skewers and let harden. The children will be delighted with these simple, wholesome sweets.

Peanut Kisses. Shell a half-pint of peanuts, removing the brown skins, and chop or roll rather fine. Beat the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth, but not dry. Add carefully two cups of granulated sugar, stir in the nuts and drop by teaspoonfuls on oiled paper. Bake in moderate oven until a golden brown.

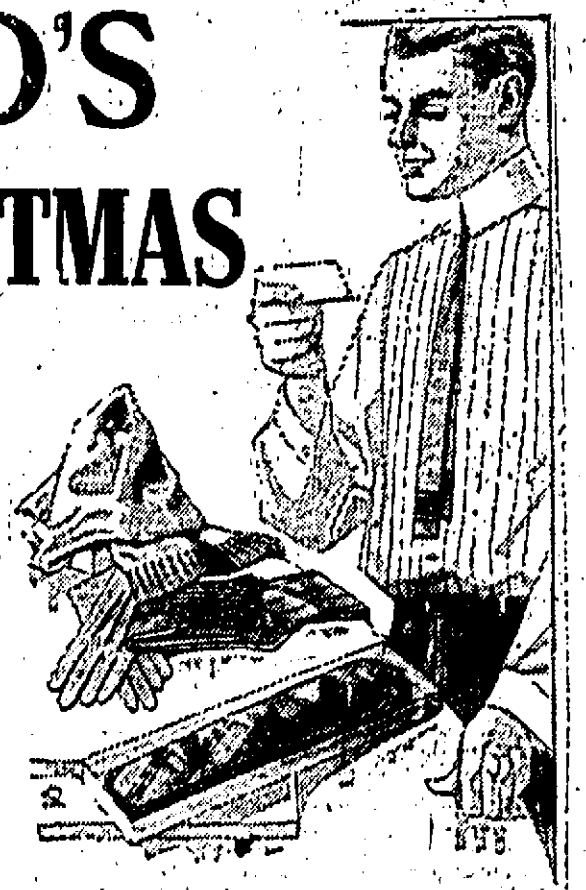

Chocolate Carmel Walnuts. Beat the white of one egg slightly, and add three tablespoonfuls of maple or carmel syrup, one tablespoonful of water, about two squares of chocolate, melted over hot water, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract, and sifted confectioner's sugar, as needed. Work with a silver plated knife and knead until thoroughly mixed, then break off small pieces and roll them into balls, flattening them into patties and setting a half of an English walnut on top of each.

Panocha. Put four cups of brown sugar, one cup of milk and two ounces of butter over the fire and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Boil until the mixture forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Add one-half pint of pecan nuts, and stir until it begins to thicken. Then turn quickly into a shallow greased pan, and when cold cut in squares.

The Value of Dress to the Business Girl.

UNFORTUNATELY today, in judging a person's ability, dress counts for more than it should. Without doubt merit is often compelled to appear in shabby clothes, but merit in shabby raiment gets scant attention. So the girl seeking a position had better face these facts and lay her plans to circumvent them.

A very capable girl sought a position which she knew was vacant on a woman's magazine. She had the education, she had the experience, and most decidedly, she had the ability to do the work. But she was just back from a prolonged illness; that is, she had just returned from an outdoor consumptive camp, for there had been symptoms of incipient tuberculosis. The diagnosis, however, had been wrong, or else she had recovered, for she was now completely well. But her funds were at a rather low ebb. And instead of spending what money she had on clothes, she decided to get along with the wardrobe she possessed until she could secure a position, an eminently sensible proceeding, one would say, considering that a costume, no matter how stylish, can scarcely take the place of food and shelter in New York or any other place.

She heard of the position and applied for it. But the fashion plate in the editorial chair glanced at the faded summer hat, the linen dress that had seen many launderings—it was rather late in the fall for such apparel—and paid scant heed to the applicant's qualifications. To an office associate, she remarked after the girl had gone, "She did not look at all as if she could do the work, and it wasn't worth while to waste time on her."

Another woman who had decided to support the family herself, after struggling for a year with poverty because of the husband's inability to find work, started out to get a position. The woman to whom she applied, for letters of introduction knew that she was almost certainly facing failure in the work she sought because of her appearance. Her hat was of her own construction, and she was by no means a milliner. The rest of her costume was in keeping. It was not the woman's fault, she had done the very best she could; and she was to be honored for her efforts. But this did not change the facts of the situation confronting her.

Most of us know that these conditions should not be. But we cannot blink the fact that they are. The fashion-plate may not last in the editorial chair, and the pendulum may swing back to where it belongs. But in the meantime, girls who need work will starve. And since this detestable value is given to dress, a girl should recognize it, and meet it as nearly as she can. If she is applying for a salesgirl's or a stenographer's position, she should be neat, smart, not extreme in dress, but immaculate and well-groomed. If she seeks work where a knowledge of fashion is part of her duties, her dress should indicate she is thoroughly familiar with the smartest modes. If she is to meet people of wealth and position, she should dress so as to make a good impression and be well received.

If she has exceptional letters of introduction, these may override the handicap of shabby or inappropriate clothes. But if she must depend upon herself, the first impression she makes, which may be the only chance she will get to make an impression, will count tremendously for or against her.

We may have our own opinion of the business despot who is in charge of clothes. But that is neither here nor there. Since he is master of the situation, and since in the majority of cases, he will judge of a woman's capability by her looks, it is well to be there with the goods in the matter of dress. But this must not be misunderstood. It is simply meant that a girl should dress in keeping with the work she seeks if she wants a most efficient ally in helping her to get it.

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

WHAT kind of a girl do men like best? Some time ago, I suggested that my readers solve this much discussed problem from the stories of their experience. The result that suggestion appears today.

Here is a hint for the girl who does not think a man appreciates a sweet tempered girl.

"I have just finished your inquiry for opinions concerning the kind of a woman a man likes. Below are my ideas on the subject drawn from my experience."

"I like one better than the rest, because I have never seen her when she was not in good temper. I have observed her in some temperamental situations and have never seen her hold over, although I know there was a storm raging beneath the surface."

"READER."

Here is a word from a feminine cynic:

"Your column brings up a subject that I have thought about a great deal. I am not a man, but I believe I know what men like in women. I often wonder how some girls who so many boys and want out so much; a visit to a girl friend's home when she was entertaining enlightened men. I have decided if any girl will allow a man to kiss and hug her and make questionable remarks to her, she can have all of the gentlemanly culture she wants."

"Men like a girl to meet them down town for dinner, and if the girl does not want wine or beer, he wants a beer the rest of the evening. I would really like to meet a good natured business man who enjoys a girl's society because she is straight and not indecent."

"I don't suppose I need tell you my opinion of this point of view or attempt to refute it. I'll leave that to the rest of my letter-friends. Here is one who has a pleasant faith in mankind."

"What kind of a girl does a man like? I'm not a man, but a married woman, and yet I feel quite sure that I can answer that question and tell a few things."

"A man once said to me that he cared for something more than a 'bundle of sweetness,' that he, although a professed infidel, would not marry a woman who was not a Christian; and that nothing was so becoming to a woman or so inspiring to a man, as for her to be good, pure, true and interested in humanity—especially children. A man wants a good housekeeper and a woman that can entertain him, not by sentiment, but by intelligent conversation, and enter into games and pleasure with him. He wants a girl who will allow him no privileges, who will not allow him to be free with her or kiss her. If he cannot kiss her, he is quite sure that other men have not and man want to be a woman's first love. Furthermore, he would rather have a girl who would coquette with him than one who would run after him. A man is a sport, and there is no fun in catching a sure thing. Ask some men if I am not right."

"This man has decided ideas. Wouldn't you like to know what kind of a woman he will really marry?"

"What kind of a girl does a man like? I'll tell you. One who, besides a loyal wife, is a staunch friend; who does not want to be going along all the time; who does not put him on a pedestal for hero worship; one who will call him down when he needs it, who will stand by him in adversity, as well as in prosperity; one who will preside over his home with dignity and who will raise his children to be what is best on earth—American ladies and gentlemen. That's the kind of a girl most men who are men like."

Here is a man who—since forbids. If you are interested as a man to know what kind of qualities you like in women or if you are interested as a woman to know what qualities you must possess to attract the opposite sex, look in on us tomorrow and we will have some more to say on this all important subject.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.
Mistakes and Precautions in Dieting—Starch and Sugar Errors.
By Alice E. Winkler.

"When I hear a person say that he is dieting, I immediately look for some freak in eating and not an intelligent selection of food." To this statement might be added that most people seem to think that if they go without meat they have expurgated all evil from their diet.

The prime cause of digestive trouble, especially intestinal indigestion, is too much starch and sugar and yet when a man or woman is afflicted in this manner they are almost sure to leave off meat, vegetables and fruit, gradually limiting their food to white bread, crackers, sweetened puddings and things of that sort.

If a physician orders a patient with intestinal indigestion to eat lean meats, fruit juices, coarse breads and vegetables without starch there will be but one chance in a hundred that the order will mean anything to the afflicted one. To such a patient all vegetables are alike except in taste, yet a white potato has twenty per cent of starch and is to be strictly avoided when a non-starch diet is indicated.

It is extremely difficult to make a patient understand that there is any difference in the composition of a potato and a green vegetable like spinach or Swiss chard, for instance.

If there is no disease requiring a special diet that eliminates some particular element, then the most efficient physicians agree that they are all round diet is best. A dinner of pork, white potatoes, plain macaroni, and a cornstarch pudding is often served, but unless the other meals are better balanced on this day, or for days at a time, the body will suffer more or less.

In the above menu substitute lean meat, add cheese to the macaroni, or serve a green salad and for the pudding offer fruit or a light gelatin dessert, and there will be good digestion and strength to do physical work. The system will not be overworked taking care of the surplus starch.

Sometimes it is a trial to know what to serve to people who must avoid starch and sugar as much as possible. Of meats may be selected, broiled chops, chicken and steak, broiled mutton or beef, broiled fish, broiled mutton and broiled white fish. Other foods allowed are oranges, lettuce, Swiss chard, in its season, rutabaga and uncooked zucchini.

Rutabaga bread takes the place of starch food in a satisfactory way. Slice bread an inch thick and lay on a shallow pan. Set in a moderately heated oven and let stand until colored a pale brown and dried all through. Prepared in this way the starch has undergone a change and become desirable which is easily digested.

Physicians often prescribe that all food must be taken warm and sometimes order that a bit of hot meat be eaten at the night meal. The single chop or small piece of steak broiled direct from the broiler is altogether different in food value from a slice of meat cooked the day before. There is no excuse for serving cold food to an invalid.

When a can of denatured alcohol is not available, it is not necessary to have an expensive chafin dish for a little alcohol stove lamp, costing twenty-five cents, will accommodate a sauce pan and a savory meal may be prepared in a few minutes.

A sweetbread is frequently ordered for a patient. The sweetbread should be absolutely fresh; cut away the pipes and veins that adhere to it and any fat. Wash it thoroughly, then simmer in salted boiling water for fifteen minutes, not allowing the water to boil at any time. Drop the sweetbread into cold water and it is ready for use later, but the cooking must be done as soon as it comes from the market, as it spoils quickly.

Cut the prepared sweetbread into dice and season with salt and pepper. Make a rich sauce and reheat the sweetbread in it, but do not let it stand and cook. Be sure that the sauce is well cooked because the uncooked starch used for the thickening may undo all the good that the sweetbread would be to the patient.

Vegetables will take longer to cook, but will be much nicer and of better color if boiled uncovered.

Chopped pistachio nuts are delicious served with plain vanilla cream or blanc mange.

A few minced dates added to fudge as it comes from the stove will give a novel and dainty confection.

Sponges are great germ collectors; they should be thoroughly scalded frequently; and hot water bottles should be washed inside and out with strong lye.

Clothes sprinkled with boiling water instead of cold will dampen much more readily, and in consequence, can be ironed more quickly.

Economical housewives sometimes grind tea leaves, just as they do coffee. They claim that only half as much tea is needed.

Cheese will be kept moist and free from mold if wrapped in cloth wrung out in vinegar.

Superstition of "The King's Evil." James I., when he was brought to England, had strong theological objections to the old superstition of the royal gift of healing, and requested to be spared from performing the traditional ceremony. His English advisers, however, were well aware of the peculiar value set upon it in the southern kingdom, and urged that to relinquish it would rob the crown of a portion of its dignity. James prudently resigned himself.—"The King's Evil," by Raymond Crawford.

Orange Tartlets.—Take two tablespoonsful of sponge cake crumbs, two tablespoonsful of cream, a teaspoonful of vanilla, two tablespoonsful of butter, one egg, the grated rind and juice of an orange and four tablespoonsful of sugar. Roll out some pastry, cut in rounds and line gem pans with it. Beat the butter to a cream, add the egg, well beaten, then the crumbs and flavoring and juice of the orange. Mix well together and put a teaspoonful in the lined gem pans. Bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.

Ice cream with a hot pudding sauce of maple syrup or chocolate makes a delicious dessert.

Caramel Rice Pudding.—Cook a cup of rice in six cups of milk in a double boiler two hours, then add a teaspoonful of salt, two eggs slightly beaten and the rind of half an orange. Carefully melt a cup of sugar in a saucepan and when a golden brown pour it into the mold, coating the sides on the inner surface. Add the rice mixture, cover and cook in the oven; let stand twenty minutes in the pan of hot water. Remove from the oven and serve with a soft custard.

Steamed Date Pudding.—Cover two and a fourth cups of soft bread crumbs with a third of a cup of milk. Chop a cup of figs and a half cup of suet, together; add three beaten eggs, a cup of brown sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Pour into a melon mold and steam for three hours and a half. Serve with an egg sauce. Beat three eggs until foamy, add half a cup of sugar and a half cup of hot milk with a teaspoonful of flavoring.

Cocoa Fruit Pudding.—Chop two-thirds of a cup of suet and a cup of figs, two and a fourth cups of bread crumbs in a meat chopper; add a half cup of cocoa, a cup of brown sugar, two eggs, a half cup of milk and a half teaspoonful of salt. Steam three hours and serve with chocolate sauce or sweetened cream, whipped.

RICE EASILY DIGESTED.
Rice differs from the other cereals principally in being much more easily digested, requiring about one-third the time in the stomach, required for wheat. It also contains less mineral than wheat or oats, more fat than wheat but less than corn or oats. In cases of weak stomach digestion, rice with cream may be a good diet, but it is liable to cause constipation. Rice is milled in the same way as wheat, the best part being fed to farm stock. Unpolished rice with cream makes a complete ration. More people live on rice than on any other food. Polished rice may be made a complete ration by the addition of an egg, which should be whipped and stirred into the rice after it is cooked but while still hot. It is best cooked in the fireless cooker.

STOP! A Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry
A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded if It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of ordinary sugar, with 3 pints of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a pint bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once. Gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate coughs in eight or ten hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains and other throat troubles, and unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported, Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in galactol and other natural healing plus elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. Thought for Today
By MRS. ROBERT M. LAFFLETTE.

RURAL WOMEN'S CLUBS.

FOR years Canada has fostered a system of farm women's clubs. The program includes the study of food, house architecture, personal hygiene, home management, training of children, and general community interests. The organization plan is not very different from that of our federated clubs, but the government gives financial aid and furnishes lecturers.

Perhaps in no profession or industry is there truer equality or closer cooperation between men and women than on the farm. The Grange, the Farmers' Institutes, the farmers' clubs include women, but they are men's organizations, and have to do with making a living rather than with life itself. The United States government has done something in the way of starting women's institutes, but with no such general success as Canada.

At the National Conservation Congress held in Kansas City in September the farm was an important subject of discussion, and organization among farm women was recognized as the basis of a better home and community life, which should place agriculture among other professions in its appeal to young people. In October the International Congress for Farm Women was held in Denver, where an example was given in a large way of what rural neighborhood clubs might hope to accomplish.

Women's clubs will do for country life what they have done for the town and city. They will develop a broad friendliness, and a public spirit which finds expression in all the many forms of civic improvement. It has always seemed to me that women's work on the farm might be lightened and simplified by the establishment of laundries and bakeries in connection with creameries. This would give more time for reading and social pleasure. Country schools should be consolidated and made social centers, with picnic grounds, baseball fields, and an assembly hall for club meetings, lectures, moving pictures, music, and wholesome entertainment for all, old and young.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

By A. W. MACY.

LORD SANDWICH AND HIS GREAT INVENTION.

John Montagu is known in history as the fourth Earl of Sandwich. Americans owe his memory a debt of gratitude because as First Lord of the Admiralty he contributed materially to the success of the American cause by his poor management of the English navy. But he is also entitled to fame on other and entirely different grounds. He was an inveterate gambler, and spent most of his time in a gaming house near the Admiralty offices. Frequently he would become so fascinated with the play that he would forget to eat or drink for twenty-four hours at a time. Then he would hastily summon an attendant and order him to bring him anything that could be had to eat. Usually it would be a slice of beef and two slices of bread. Placing the beef between the two pieces of bread he would devour them with great relish. He was so fond of this hasty luncheon, and praised it so highly, that it came to be called after his name, or rather after his title. To this day "sandwiches" continue to be an important feature of lunch counters.

She Was From Missouri.
Professor Jordan, the corn expert of the Missouri College of Agriculture, tells a story illustrative of the superstition with which people often view new ideas and inventions. In pioneer days a settler near the present town of Albany, Mo., bought for his wife the first cook stove ever seen in that part of the state. It was an object of great curiosity, and the woman's next-door neighbor—who lived ten miles away—came to see how it would work. Without comment she saw the dinner cooked; she ate the meal with judgment held in reserve, and then remarked with a shake of her head: "Well, Sarah, it cooks all right, and the victuals taste good, but I don't believe it will ever be a success."—Youth's Companion.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, Dec. 2, 1871. Official advices received by the government yesterday and today indicate that we are involved in no considerable difficulties with Spain. Officials in Cuba have for some time shown an utter indifference to the protection of the life and property of American citizens. The Cuban volunteers there have maltreated Americans and driven them within a recent period outside of Havana. An armed fleet of four or five vessels has been ordered with all possible dispatch to Havana to be placed in immediate communication with Consul General Biddle.

The thermometer registered ten degrees below zero yesterday morning. The St. Charles river is frozen over. The Apaches are raiding southern Arizona successfully. The demand for teams in Fond du Lac for lumbering purposes in the pioneer is unprecedented. One firm has already purchased seventy-five farmhand with calloused soul and a dull axe. Thanksgiving also serves a useful purpose in curbing the vanity of man. Nothing will reduce the pride of a complacent host quicker than trying to carve a turkey which has died of old age and general debility. Thanksgiving is a day of rest for all mankind except the cook and the cranberry merchant. It is a day when old folks go together in the cozyest of coziness and allow the younger classes to interfere with the flow of conversation. Some people go to church on Thanksgiving, and others go into bankruptcy. The man who can't find anything to give thanks for in this grand old U. S. A. ought to shove back from the table and watch his slowly expanding son go through a third helping of Thanksgiving turkey. That is a sight to cheer the heart of the most hardened dyspeptic, and it is one of the glories of Thanksgiving day.

Cured in His Own Home Town. Racine, Wis. Jacob Eren tells the way for his fellow townsmen to be cured of kidney and bladder trouble as he himself was cured. "For over 20 years I had kidney trouble and catarrh of the bladder. I read an advertisement of Foley Kidney Pills, got some and took them. Before taking them I was not able to work, but now I am improving every day. The action of my bladder was frequent and painful and I lost a great deal of sleep at night, but since taking Foley Kidney Pills all this pain and annoyance is gone. My back no longer aches and I feel better in every way. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills to all who have kidney trouble, badger drug Co."

His Objection. "What is your chief objection to moving pictures?" "The fact that, accumulated behind them," Birmingham Age-Herald.

WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY SAVING HUMAN LIVES.

Madison, Wis.—In Wisconsin the diseases of humanity are fought by the same methods used by that state to eradicate political evils—educational campaigns among the common people. In this movement the state board of health utilizes every source of enlightenment. The secretary, Dr. C. A. Harper, a physician of broad experience, has naturally called to this aid the scientific staff of the University of Wisconsin. He has named as such men Prof. W. D. Hoar, Dean H. L. Russell and Dr. M. P. Ravenel who first discovered by isolation of the bovine germ that tuberculosis could be transmitted from cattle to human beings, have become household possessions. To diminish the loss of life in Wisconsin the state and the university have furnished the people with the

An Eye Opener. Always have a glass medicine drop per and a bottle of rose water in the medicine chest and in your traveling bag. Then when you get a foreign body in your eye you will be spared much pain and discomfort if the following very simple and harmless method is pursued: Put into the medicine dropper six drops of the rose water. Pull down the lower lid, float the liquid on the surface of the injured eye. After the rose water has been in the eye for a few seconds use the empty medicine dropper to suck out the liquid and the foreign matter will come with it.—Home Department, National Magazine.

Judge Here Monday. Judge Grimm will be at the court house Monday to hear matters for the court which are ready for hearing at that time.

Realty Transfer. According to the terms of a warranty deed filed in the office of the register of deeds today, Fred Haug and wife have sold to James S. Roberts property in the town of Center section 14, for the consideration of $8,000.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally, acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists. Also Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

"Well," the eminent specialist said, "I shall have to make an examination, particularly at the base of the brain, and it will be necessary for you to take off that high, tight collar." The caller did so. "Why, doctor, the headache has gone!" "I thought so. Wear looser collars. Five plunks, if you please. Thanks. Good day."

It's Janesville testimony. It can be investigated.

C. F. Lowery, 1017 Wheeler street, Janesville, Wis., says: "For several months I was in poor health and my system seemed to be filled with uric poison. My back ached intensely and I had but little strength or energy. I decided to try a good kidney medicine, and as I had often heard of Donn's Kidney Pills highly spoken of, I got a supply at the People's Drug Co. It did not take this remedy long to bring me entire relief. At that time I publicly told of my experience and during the years that have since passed, I have not changed my high opinion of Donn's Kidney Pills. Whenever I use this remedy, it does good work."

The Kingdom of SLENDER SWORDS

by HALLIE ERMINE RIVES

Copyright, 1910, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

For a second Daunt hesitated. The little native house in the Street-of-the-

DAUNT UNROLLED THE KAKEMONO.

Miss Valley was a sentimental place to him. There he had worked out the models of his first glider; there he had talked with his princess of dreams, his "Lady of the Many-Colored Sires." The glimpse of Phil had reminded him that it now had a tenant. When he showed it to Barbara it should not be with Phil in possession.

She noted the hesitation and, somewhat puzzled and wondering if to oriental ethics the suggestion was a gauche one, waved the matter lightly aside. "You are just going to say 'one of these days.' Please don't. When I was little that always meant never. I withdrew the motion, but what is this coming?"

A boy was ascending the platform. He bowed and laid a box of thin, unpainted wood at Daunt's feet. It contained a kakemono, or wall painting, rolled and tied with a red and white cord of twisted rice paper. Daunt read the accompanying card.

"Miss Happy-For-a-Thousand-Years," he said, "presents her compliments to the illustrious strangers. She is the star. The gift is a pretty custom, isn't it, even if it is advertisement? Here comes the lady herself to present her thanks for our distinguished patronage."

She bowed low before them, smiling, her small plump face powdered white as mistletoe berries above her carmine painted lips. Daunt unrolled the kakemono, revealing a delicately painted cluster of butterflies. He chatted with her in the vernacular, and she replied with much drawing in of breath and flute-like laughter.

"She says," he translated, "that this is a picture of her honorable ancestors. A little smile, a good-natured, a breath of perfume, and the powdered face and gorgeous kimono were gone. The orchestra chirped, the curtain parted, and another figure began."

Miss Happy-For-a-Thousand-Years!

As the party walked back to the waiting ricksha Barbara wondered what lay beneath that smiling surface. She had heard of the strenuous training that at five years began to teach the gauzy, fragile, child butterfly to paint its wings, to flit and sing and dance its dazzling moth flame way. For the geisha nothing was too gorgeous, too transcendent. Her lovers might be statesmen and princes. But in return she must be always gay, always laughing, always young, all things to all men, to the end of the butterfly chapter—butterfly hair, butterfly-gown and butterfly heart!

Barbara wondered.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE DEVIL PIPES TO HIS OWN.

DAUNT, HENSONIN, huge and white, dinned with Phil by his side, strolled away through the swarming crowd.

Not a word, not a glance of the younger man that evening, had escaped him. He had been studying him with all the minute attention of that great, overweening brain that, from an origin of which he never spoke, had made him one of the foremost experimenters in Europe. The swift gleam in Phil's eyes as he watched the geisha, the eager drinking in of the girl's dulcetness, the colors and perfume to which he stretched himself like a cat—the watchful, impassive eyes took note of everything. All Baronsin's talk had held an evil lure. It had touched on the extravagant and sensual vagaries of luxury, the sybaritic pleasures of the social gourmet, subjects appealing to the imagination of the youth whom he was examining like a slide under the microscope. They had stopped once at a chaya for tea, but Phil had called for the hot native sake, and as his misty, sherry-like fumes crept into his blood he talked with increasing recklessness. He went on with ravelled contemptuousness Baronsin's feline eyes began to harbor a stealthy satisfaction. He had guessed why Phil had suggested coming to Mukojima. The latter's restlessness, his anxious surveillance of the passers-by, might have enlightened a less observant spectator.

Phil's new passion had, in fact, a strong hold on him. That long ago picture of him, barefooted in the surf, frequent recollection had stamped on his brain, and the sight of her fresh beauty today had fanned the coal to a flame. Those stolen kisses in the bamboo lane had roused a lurking devil that counted nothing but his own desires. For this hour, while the sake ran in his pulses, the flame over-shadowed even Baronsin.

"Well, my boy," said the latter at length quizzically, "when you find her just give me the hint, and I'll go."

Phil flushed, then laughed, softly. "So you are a mind reader, too?" he said.

"It's written all over you," said Baronsin. "Why didn't you tell me? We could have postponed our dinner and left you free for the chase. It is a waste, oh?"

"Yes," said Phil. "I haven't had much luck with her yet. I just happened to know she was to be here tonight. She's a pretty little devil," he added, "the prettiest I've seen in Japan."

"The Japanese type is the rage in Paris now," said the other. "Take her there, dress her in jewels and drive her through the Bois some afternoon and you'll be the most talked of man in France next morning."

The red deepened in Phil's cheek. The prospect drew him. He looked at Baronsin, Paris and jewels!

He drank more sake at the next tea house. It had begun to show in a shaking of the hand, a louder voice. Suddenly Phil sprang to his feet. "There she is!" he exclaimed.

Baronsin looked. "Lovely!" he said. "I congratulate you. I'll walk back to the motorcar—the slight amuse-

You can come along when you please. Dinner will wait. And, anyway, what's dinner to a pretty woman?"

Phil plunged into the crowd, and the expert spoke quickly to the servant, who was staring after him. "Better keep him in sight," he said. "You can come when he does."

Baronsin was sauntering on, when a turmoil behind him made him turn. A woman's cry and an angry oath in English rang out, startlingly clear above the low murmur of the multitude. He caught a glimpse of a Japanese form leaping like a tiger; of Phil lying in the dust of the road; of a girl vanishing swiftly into the shadows.

As the expert hurried forward Phil stumbled to his feet. Lights were dancing before his eyes, and his neck felt as if he had been garroted. With his first breath he turned on Ishida, incoherent with rage and curses. The big man caught his arm.

"The honorable air miku mistake," said the Japanese smoothly. "Man have done that who have run away."

"He has!" said Phil fiercely. "There was no one else near me but the girl. He did it himself. He tried to injure me!"

The fingers of the Japanese were clenched, but his face was impassive as he added: "I think he have been snit thief."

"That's no doubt the way it was," said Baronsin. "Why on earth would Ishida touch you? That's an old thief's trick."

The fellow tried to get your watch, I suppose. But we must remove on. The police will be here presently, and we don't want our names in the papers."

They went rapidly through the close ranks that had been watching, with the decorous, inquisitive silence so typically oriental.

"I suppose you're right," said Phil sulkily. "I beg your pardon, Ishida."

The Japanese bowed gravely. "Only a mistake," he said, "which honorable sir make."

The three strolled front of the cherry moon tea house when Daunt's party arrived was glowing with tiers of large round lanterns of oiled paper bearing a conventionalized moon and cherry blossoms. At the door sat rows of little velvet lined sandals. More shoes were discarded, and servants drew on the guests' feet loose-slippers of cotton cloth, soft and yielding. One other guest was awaiting the party at the entrance. This was Captain Viscount Sakai of the general staff, spruce, fine featured and in immaculate European evening dress. He had a clear olive complexion and, save for the narrow, Japanese eye, might have been a Spaniard.

The small second story shokudo in which they dined was floored in soft tatami edged with black and laid in close fitting geometrical pattern. Save for a plain alcove at one end, holding a dwarf pine and a single nantan branch with clusters of bright red berries, it was empty. There was no drapery. The walls were sliding screens of gold leaf on which were finely drawn etchings of pine trees covered with snow, the effect suggested rather than finished. It was brilliant with electric light.

"Thy square tables of black lacquer were disposed along three sides of the room, one for each guest. They were but four inches high, and on the floor behind each lay a thin, flat zabuton or cushion of brocade. The bowing geisha in wonderful rainbow kimono who awaited them might have stepped from the temple stage at Mukojima. These pointed to the tables with inviting smiles:

"Please sit down!" they said in unison.

"I never could 'sheel down' gracefully when any one is looking!" complained Patricia as she tucked her small feet under her on the kneeling cushion.

"Banzai!" commented Voynich, setting his monocle. "You have practiced before a mirror!" He collapsed beside her with a groan. "I shall be reincarnated as an accordion!"

"Count," said Patricia plaintively, "no bouquets, please. I know when you are stringing me."

He looked blank, and the Japanese officer hastily produced a lavender note-book and a gold pencil. "That is a new one," he said. "I must—what is it? Ah, yes! I must not let it escape me. I write it in my swear album."

"The viscount is learning American slang," Patricia informed Barbara. "One of these days you must tell him some of the very latest."

He looked across with gravely twinkling eyes. "I shall be—tick-to to die!" he said. "It is my specialty. Next year I become professor in slang literature at the Imperial university."

The meal began merrily. Barbara sat on Daunt's left, with one of the attendants next her. Baronsin Stroloff was on Daunt's other hand. Barbara remembered it afterward as a meal of slight dulcetness—of warm, pungent, wine-like liquor in blue porcelain bottles, of food of strange look and cloying taste, highly colored and seasoned, in a hundred tiny red and black lacquer dishes that carried her back to her doll days, with covers patterned in gold, served by prostrating geishas whose kimonos were woven with violet Fujis, winged dragons and marvelous exotic blossoms.

Daunt pointed to a dish which had just been set before her. "You must try the hama-no-renkon," he said. "That's cooked lotus root. It's nearly as good as it looks."

"How do you ever remember the names?"

"Oh, it's quite easy to talk Japanese," he replied recklessly. "There are only fifty syllables in the language, and any way you string them together it means something or other. It doesn't matter whether it's the right thing or not if you just bow and smile. There are seventeen ways of drawing in your breath which are a lot more important than what you say."

"What disgraceful nonsense! What is that pink thing?"

"Raw bonito, the refuge of dyspeptics," Voynich then said nothing else at home, they say. The variegated compound is kuchi-toi. It's made of sugared chestnuts, looks and pickled fish. May I compliment you on the way you handle your chopsticks? At my first Japanese dinner I hit one in two. Isn't Baronsin Stroloff standing by the way?"

The latter was deep in discussion with Patricia, moving her hands in quick, vivacious gestures which clusters of opals made into flashes of blue fire. "But you must send to Nakodate for your fur," she was saying.

"I will give you the address of my man there. You should get them now, not wait till fall, when the tourists have bought all the best."

"I'm dying for an ermine stole!"

"Oh, my dear, not ermine! Got sables. One can be so insulting in sables!"

Barbara laughed with the rest. "What a nice lot you are," she said, "all knowing each other, all friendly! I thought diplomats were always poring over international law books and drawing up nasty treaties."

"It's not all snakes and ale," he asserted. "I worked till 3 this morning on a cipher telegram."

"After the melodrama?"

"Ah, it was opera!" he protested. "It has left no memories of only flowers and accents and music!"

"You had most of the music, if I remember rightly."

"How unlikely! I could no more help it than fly."

"On the glider?"

He laughed again. "Don't forget what is to happen one day with that same machine."

"What is that?"

"I am to swoop down and carry you off. It was your own suggestion, you know."

"But it was to be at the Imperial review. That doesn't happen again for a year."

"I won't wait that long!"

She turned her head; her eyes sparkled in the enigmistic light. Her fingers were fluttering a square of red paper that had been rolled about her chopsticks. On it was a line of tiny characters. "What is that, written?"

According to Evidence.

A remarkably brief and effective summing up was once quoted by Lord James in an after-dinner speech. It was delivered by an Irish judge trying a man for pig stealing. The evidence of his guilt was conclusive, but the prisoner insisted on calling a number of witnesses, who testified most emphatically to his general good character. After hearing their evidence and the counsel's speeches, the judge remarked: "Gentlemen of the Jury, I think that the only conclusion you can arrive at is that the pig was stolen by the prisoner, and that he is the most amiable man in the county."—London Chronicle.

PIANO BUYING SIMPLIFIED

THIS household god, the piano, perplexes the average buyer the most of anything that is ever purchased for the home. He is often conscious of his own lack of knowledge as to quality and value and also hesitates to seek the advice of others for fear that they may not be disinterested. If he is of the over-credulous kind and happens to read a puzzle contest ad, he is liable to give way to the common human failing of expecting something for nothing and that is the rock upon which he splits. The puzzle contest fraud is almost a thing of the past and hardly worth mentioning since the United States government has taken such a strong stand in bringing the offenders to justice.

But very few people in this County buy pianos from mail order houses and the few that do are usually held up by the neighborhood as a horrible example, so that this class of competition is really not worth considering by the local trade.

Misleading piano advertisements appear daily in the Chicago newspapers and the practice of the big houses there of advertising pianos which they never had in stock is so common that it is one of the jokes in trade circles that the ad writer of the house does not consult the stock keeper as it is not considered necessary to have the bargains in stock as the only object of the advertisement is to bring people to the store and sell them a new instrument.

No doubt many Janesville people have had the common experience of being informed by the affable salesman that the bargain piano which they came to see has just been sold, but that they have some beautiful new ones which they are selling at very low prices. The wonderful bargains which have been advertised but never existed have put millions of dollars into the coffers of the big houses on Piano Row, Chicago.

How is the uninformed buyer to know when he is getting a square deal? We believe the best answer is "Buy the piano that has the most home testimony as to its quality and durability, in other words Buy a Schiller Piano, as it is the best known piano in Rock County." Its fame is not local by any means as it is known from coast to coast, but I wish to impress upon you the fact that in the ten years that I have had the exclusive agency for this instrument, not a single case of dissatisfaction has arisen. Every Schiller piano that I ever sold has helped to sell another and I can certainly commend the policy of the manufacturer in putting the money into the piano instead of printers ink or subsidizing the great artists.

I am writing this ad myself and paying for it myself, without even a suggestion from the Schiller Piano Co. It is intended expressly for the few intending buyers who have not investigated.

Schiller pianos are for sale everywhere and exclusive territory is assigned, so you can rest assured that my competitors, who pretend to quote prices on Schiller pianos in this territory, are just simply lying.

Beware of the "thirty day free trial, nothing down, offers." The meanest piano that ever was built will stand up all right for thirty days. You cannot season a piano in this time. You will know just as much about it in thirty minutes as you will in thirty days. Go to a good piano store once, twice or a dozen times if necessary and make comparisons.

Our year end clearance sale offers exceptional advantages to careful buyers who wish to procure a slightly used piano of standard make at a low price. Prices now $98 and up.

If your piano is not working, "why not trade it for an inner-player that all can play." You may not have to lose a dollar on yours. We do not handle the cheap players for the simple reason that we are not looking for trouble. The Chase & Baker is a dependable instrument and satisfactory to the person who wishes to express his own musical feelings by means of the mechanical player.

This is the strictly up-to-date, 88-note player with all the best modern expression devices. We also furnish rolls for player pianos of all makes and at lower prices than elsewhere.

You can have all these great artists sing for you in your own home

The world's greatest singers to provide an evening of music for yourself and friends—whenever you wish, as often as you wish.

A performance such as is never even witnessed in the world's greatest opera houses—no management could afford to pay the thousands and thousands of dollars necessary to engage all these artists for a single performance, even if such a thing was possible.

And yet you can command their services on the Victor and have them sing their greatest arias—and enjoy their voices just as much as though you heard them in person.

Come in and hear these famous singers, and let us show you the different styles of the Victor ($20 to $100) and the Victor-Victrola ($15 to $250).

Nothing Nicer for Christmas

If you contemplate buying a Victrola for Christmas DO IT NOW, as we are warned by the manufacturers that there is going to be another shortage this year, just as there was last, when so many people were disappointed. We are in a position just now to supply all demands and would also remind you that we take old instruments in exchange. If the Victrola would do you more good than your piano make the change now and be ready for Christmas.

We are closing out all string instruments to discontinue that department and make room for talking machines. This is your opportunity to buy violins, mandolins, guitars, etc., at the actual wholesale price or less.
